

Korean brags Nixon given $500,000

Washington (AP) — Korean businessman Tongsun Park boasted in December 1973 that he gave thousands of dollars in campaign contributions to many prominent American politicians, including $500,000 to then-President Richard M. Nixon, a customs official said Thursday.

Park, a rice broker who is the key figure in a Justice Department investigation of influence-peddling in Congress by Korean agents, was carrying a list with U.S. politicians' names and figures he said represented campaign contributions when he was searched by customs agents in Anchorage, Alaska, on Dec. 8, 1973.

Park made frantic efforts to recover or tear up the list and other papers dealing with rice transactions before inspectors read them, said Donovan Working, former U.S. Customs district director for Anchorage.

Later, a phone call to customs officials in Washington determined the papers could not be confiscated, Working said.

Park then bragged that the two- and three-digit figures beside each name stood for "thousands of dollars" in contributions, which had "something to do with assistance from these officials with some sort of a rice program that he was involved in," according to Working, now district customs director in Laredo, Texas.

A government source said Thursday that Justice Department investigators have not determined the significance of Park's list, particularly whether it meant Park had made any payments to the officials.

"That list can be viewed as one of Park's wildest dreams," but investigators must still check out its meaning, the source said.

Most of the names on the list have not been made public. Working said that in addition to Nixon, he recalled that the names of Sens. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., were on the list, along with then Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif.

A spokesman for Humphrey said Thursday, "There were no contributions to the senator from Park, and he had no connection with Park or the Korean lobby."

An aide to Goldwater said the senator had thoroughly checked his financial records back to 1964, "and none of us can recall any kind of contribution or gift of any kind from Park or anybody connected in any fashion with him."

The aide said that Goldwater is a member of the posh Georgetown Club, a private club here owned by Park, but does not have ties with Park himself.

Park, who also owns an export-import business here, is out of the country, but his lawyers have said he has denied allegations that he made illegal cash payments to any congressmen.

Park reportedly has told federal investigators about contributions he made to several congressmen, including former Reps. Cornelius Gallagher of New Jersey and Hanna of California. Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., has acknowledged receiving campaign contributions totaling $4,650 from Park in 1972 and 1974.

Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards admitted Monday that his wife accepted a gift of $10,000 from Park in 1971 after Edwards, then a congressman, turned down Park's offer of a contribution to Edwards' gubernatorial campaign.

The Korean government has denied that Park was acting on its behalf.

Before 1974, it was not illegal for foreigners to make contributions to American political campaigns. But it would be illegal for Park to undertake any lobbying activity in Congress on behalf of the Korean government without registering with the Justice Department under the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

Park was searched by customs agents in Anchorage because they suspected he was bringing an expensive camera into the United States as an undeclared gift, Working recalled Thursday.

When inspectors began looking through his papers in search of the camera's invoice, "Park became very adamant and very hysterical that nobody was going to look into his briefcase," Working said.

"He got hysterical, crying that no one could look at this, that this was high priority business," said Working. The documents were in Korean, except for the names of the U.S. politicians and the numbers, he said, but one inspector was able to translate most of the Korean.

Park's claims of political connections made the inspectors wary of forcibly searching him, and Working twice called his superiors in Washington to ask if they should confiscate or copy Park's papers.

"He got rather proud after the phone call when it became apparent that they were reluctant to proceed with a forcible search," Working said. That is when Park said that the figures beside the politicians' names stood for "thousands of dollars," Working quoted Park as saying. "He had Nixon for 500. He said, 'That's not $500, but $500,000.'"

Park told the inspectors it was important for him to get to Washington because he was having a dinner for some important political figures the following evening, Working recalled.

In fact, the next night Park hosted a birthday party for House Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill. Among the guests was then Vice President Gerald Ford and two Nixon cabinet members.

Population won't double so fast

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — Falling birth rates and unforeseen deaths from hunger have slowed global population growth to the point where a doubling of world population by the year 2000 is no longer anticipated, according to the Worldwatch Research Institute.

Paced by two of the world's four most populous countries, China and the United States, population growth has decreased in rich and poor countries alike, reversing for the first time in history a trend of gradually accelerating growth, the Worldwatch study adds.

3,005,234 receive flu shots

Atlanta (UPI) — More than three million Americans received swine influenza shots last week, a "significant" increase over the previous week, the national Center for Disease Control said Thursday.

Through last week, 5,698,716 doses of vaccine had been given since the start of inoculations Oct. 1, with more than half that number, 3,005,234, getting their immunizations last week.

There are 135,255,112 persons 18 years of age or older eligible to receive the vaccinations.

Shots have bicentennial flavor

Crawfordsville, Ind. (AP) — This central Indiana community wound up two weeks of its swine flu inoculation program on a bicentennial note. Officials said 1,776 persons got the shots.

Czech plane hijacked

Prague, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — An armed hijacker forced a Czechoslovak Ilyushin-18 airliner carrying 105 persons on a domestic flight to fly to Munich, West Germany, Thursday, airport officials said.

They said they received reports that the hijacker was disarmed at the Munich airport.

Airport officials said the plane left Bratislava for the Tatra Mountains Thursday night when it was forced to alter course to Munich.

Legion murder theory rapped

Washington (UPI) — A confidential Congress report says the mysterious "Legionnaires Disease" that killed 29 persons may have been induced by a crazed murderer using a lethal gas concoction.

But the report and its mad chemist theory drew quick fire Friday from a scientist cited as one of its sources, and from the National Center for Disease Control, which ran the inconclusive federal investigation of the Legionnaires Disease.

The House subcommittee staff report called the investigative efforts conducted by the center and by Pennsylvania health officials "a fiasco" that followed blind leads and spoiled medical evidence.

"It is not inconceivable that a demented veteran or a paranoid anti-military type could have committed an act of murder in Philadelphia's Bellevue, Stratford hotel," Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., wrote in the report to other members of his consumer protection subcommittee.

The report quotes the University of Connecticut's Dr. William Sunderman, an expert on nickel poisoning, as saying residues found in the victims suggest they could have succumbed to a tasteless, odorless gas made of dry ice and nickel carbonyl, and let loose in the air ducts of the American Legion's convention center hotel.

Sunderman, after reading a syndicated columnist's account of his alleged conclusions, said that news report "dramatizes and oversimplifies completely and distorts my statements."

"We did find increased concentrations of nickel in the lung tissues of five of the six Legionnaires that were sent to us for examination, but we also found increased concentrations in some of the control specimens that were sent to us.

"Hence, we were unable to reach any conclusions regarding the possible role of nickel exposure as a causative factor in the Legionnaires Disease."

In Atlanta, health officials denied Murphy's charges that their investigation dwelt too long on the possibility the Legionnaires Disease might have been swine flu, and that they ruined tissue specimens so that toxic poisons could not be identified.

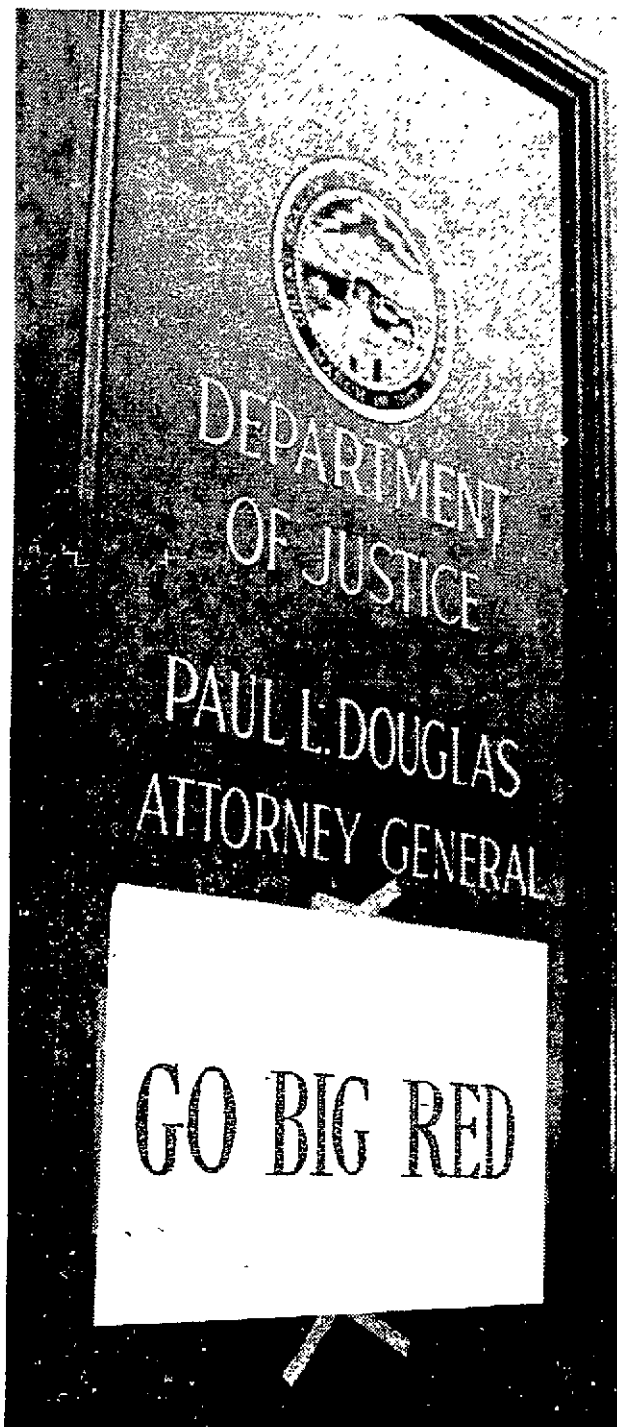

Some 180 persons contracted the same puzzling illness at the Philadelphia hotel July 21-24. Twenty-nine died of the disease, which was symptomized by chest pains and fever.

In a futile effort to identify the cause of the ailment, federal, state and local health officials pursued a number of theories including the possibility — later rejected — that the victims died of swine flu.

"This commenced what can only be described as a fiasco that has become the new 'Philadelphia Story,'" Murphy said in the report.

Murphy conceded that a number of "kooks and crackpots" had suggested exotic theories as to what caused the disease.

But he said Sunderman had received "an anonymous and ominous sounding letter" on July 28, which referred to "substances containing nickel carbonyl and discussed the murder and killing of authority and military type figures."

A sign of the season in Nebraska.

Legal 'opinion' shared by all

By Dick Holman

Star Staff Writer

Nowhere does the opinion say whether or not it was issued officially.

Nonetheless, it seemed the Nebraska Justice Department had produced it and — ignoring protocol — posted copies on two doors along the dim, austere hall of the attorney general's Capitol quarters.

There, near the Supreme Court's equally staid cells, upholding loyalty to the visibly re-established autumnal principles of the state, are the red letters on white paper: "Go Big Red."

It is doubtless Justice's briefest opinion ever.

And — contrary to another controversial opinion now seeking a court prescription — no one has challenged the three-word missive as constitutionally suspect or found the conclusion faulty.

Yet Justice prevailed, as it were, and the highly placed culprit responsible for the irregular opinion confessed eagerly: "If I had 'em (in quantity), I'd put 'em on all the doors," said Dorothy Jones, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas' executive secretary.

Left short then, she chose for posting the doors not at random as it would seem, because they don't reveal who's behind them (room numbers being the only clue). The pair front for the "worst nuts in the office" among avid pro-Cornhusker fans — Assistant Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher and (who else?) herself.

"If I had the money," Mrs. Jones followed good legal procedure and offered the rationale for her opinion, "I'd go to every game" the NU gridders have scheduled. A clue she was the perpetrator was knowledge of her handy desktop file of blackshirt game scores the past several years.

When she had major dental work done before the NU-Missouri game last weekend, Mrs. Jones asked her dentist if she could still attend the contest — even though it was televised into her home.

She got the green light, but once in Memorial Stadium, her tender and bleeding mouth hurt and "I couldn't yell." She "cried a little" about the more painful Husker upset. (Who says Justice denies emotion?)

"You see the sacrifices we idiots make?" Mrs. Jones laughed, rallying the broadly shared Big Red fan's fervor and offering another supremely official, albeit verbal, opinion (despite even Missouri's win) to support final arguments on upcoming Saturdays.

Zorinsky envisions end of farm-labor animosity

By Don Walton

Star Staff Writer

If he is elected to the U.S. Senate next week, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky said, he would attempt to break the long-standing political animosity in Nebraska between agriculture and labor.

"I want to become a catalyst to unite farmers and laborers to work together for what's in the best interests of the state," the Democratic nominee declared in a Lincoln interview Thursday.

Farmers and laborers have much more in common than they realize, he said, but they are often pushed into conflict by the political rhetoric of the Republican Party.

"My opponent (GOP Congressman John M. McCollister) seems to think that continued divisiveness is in his best interests," Zorinsky said.

Specifically at issue is recent McCollister campaign advertising listing organized labor's contributors to Zorinsky's campaign and asking whether Nebraska voters "want George Meany and Big Labor to sit in Nebraska's U.S. Senate seat."

Although this is his first statewide race, Zorinsky said, he "understand(s) this is the saying type of old political trickery which has been perpetrated on the public" in past Nebraska campaigns.

Unions have contributed $37,663 of the $215,394 collected for Zorinsky's primary and general election campaigns, the mayor noted.

That's 17.4% of the total, he said.

"In no way would those (labor) contributions be able to finance my campaign or obligate anyone to the dictates of the contributors," Zorinsky said.

"No amount of contributions to my candidacy will buy anything but open and honest government."

Implications that "labor controls me" are both "an outright lie and an insult to the intelligence of the voters of Nebraska," he said.

As a matter of fact, Zorinsky said, he will seek a seat on the Agriculture Committee if he is elected to the Senate because that is "the priority interest" for this state.

If he goes to Washington next January, he said, his first actions will include introduction of a resolution seeking "a congressional investigation concerning federal manipulation of agricultural prices."

And he will work to tighten beef import laws and help write a new farm program which will "assure the family farm of enough income to cover the cost of production."

KKK men so inept they belong in comics

Chicago (UPI) — The Illinois version of the Ku Klux Klan has less than 100 masked members who are so inept they have trouble burning crosses, the Illinois Legislative Investigative Commission reports.

The Legislature ordered the investigation after rumors circulated that the state Klan had a membership of 2,000 in northern Illinois and was engaged in a concerted membership drive.

The report, released this week, said three undercover agents infiltrated the Klan with such success that one became "the second highest officer in the largest of the three Klan factions in Illinois."

"The Klan of today belongs in a comic strip," the commission said, "for there is indeed something amusing about a handful of grown men running around in white robes, burning crosses at picnics, who are unable to see that the issues that once attracted a large following — white supremacy, the Red terror — are almost as dead as the Klan itself."

To illustrate the Klan's ineffectiveness, the commission described a cross-lighting ceremony last July 10 at a farm near Georgetown, Ill.

The rally started an hour late. There was no speaker's stand.

"While the men were trying to raise the 60-foot cross, the ropes snapped," the commission report said.

"The cross crashed back to earth, almost crushing several Klansmen.

Then they decided to chop off 10 feet from the bottom to make the cross lighter and easier to raise.

"After taking a few swings, the Klansman wielding the only available ax missed his mark and broke the handle in half. He had to finish the job with a hatchet.

"In all, it took almost three hours for the Klansmen to raise and secure the cross."

When everything was ready, the Klansmen couldn't get the cross to burn.

"The Klansman had wrapped the cross in a flame-retardant rug pad instead of the usual burlap," the report said.

Pair rob injured man, ransack parents' home

Davenport, Iowa (UPI) — Two men attempted to rob a young man early Thursday as he lay seriously injured in his van and then went to the home of the victim's parents and ransacked it, police said.

Police said Randy Burroughs, 20, who was injured when his van slammed into a railroad overpass, was asked by two men for his wallet while he was lying in the wreck. Burroughs told police he pleaded with the men to call for help, but they did so only after he handed over an empty wallet.

They also notified the victim's parents — Mr. and Mrs. Reinold Burroughs — and while the Burroughses were at the hospital, police said, the two men apparently used a key taken from the wrecked van to gain entrance to the home.

"Police said the home was ransacked and numerous items, including two stereos and $100 in cash, were stolen.

Burroughs was in satisfactory condition at Mercy Hospital. Police said no arrests were made.

Jimmy Carter raises possibility of tax cut

Mr. Peanut draws a handshake and a smile from Carter in Erie.

(c) New York Times

New York — Jimmy Carter raised Thursday the possibility of a tax cut if he is elected president, but then indicated it should not be taken as a firm promise.

The Democratic presidential candidate campaigned in Pittsburgh, Erie, Pa., and Cleveland before flying to New York Thursday afternoon for appearances in Brooklyn and Nassau County — in his second visit to New York State, with its block of 41 electoral college votes, in two days.

Although he has for many months called for sweeping reform of the federal income tax system, Carter has not explicitly promised a tax cut as such, leaving the impression that "reform" would collect about the same amount of total revenues but would increase the burden on the well-to-do or those who enjoy large tax shelters.

But Wednesday in Pittsburgh, during an appearance on a radio show called "The Lovable Fox" in which listeners call in questions, Carter said his "top priority" would be to "not raise taxes." He added there is "a much more likely prospect of some tax reduction in the next four years — I think that is almost inevitable."

When a reporter asked him later if he meant a general tax cut, and not just a shift in tax burden from poorer to more prosperous citizens, Carter reportedly said, "I would say that is true."

At a speech Wednesday night he also said that an increase in government revenues caused by economic recovery from the recession could be used "partly for a substantial tax reduction, I think..."

On Thursday morning at the Erie, Pa., airport, Carter was asked to amplify his views on the subject. He said that if annual economic growth were raised to a rate of 5 to 6%, unemployment was cut to 4% and inflation was controlled, there would eventually be a total of $60 billion more federal revenues available annually.

"I would say that a substantial portion of that would go for a tax cut, a substantial part of that would go for implementing new programs, but the new programs would be very carefully phased in over that period to make sure that we do arrive with a balanced budget."

All of this left some journalists familiar with Carter's campaign uncertain of the significance of Carter's words, especially since he was not using a forum such as a major speech to discuss the question and seemed to be dropping only sketchy hints as to what he meant. His press secretary, Jody Powell, said Carter did not intend to inject a major new issue of tax reduction into the campaign, and Powell dismissed a suggestion that the remarks were meant to influence what may be a close election Tuesday.

At midday at a large street rally in downtown Cleveland, Carter said, "I'm very careful about what I promise." He went on to say that if "we can have just a normal relationship between government spending and our normal spending we could realize enough income to have a combination of new programs and perhaps some tax cuts."

Carter added, "I'm very careful not to promise that for sure."

Carol Smith, a policewoman who arrested her chief on suspicion of drunken driving, has been relieved of her duties.

Mayor William Craven and several City Council members asked Officer Smith, a policewoman in Roslyn, Wash., for 13 months, to turn in her badge.

Kittitas County sheriff's reports said Officer Smith spotted Police Chief Frank Dallahan driving his patrol car erratically on a Roslyn street last week. She stopped the car and, assisted by Patrolman Pete Gsiadacz Jr., carted the chief to jail, deputies said. At the jail, the chief was given a breathalyzer test.

Although the test indicated a small amount of alcohol in the chief's blood, the officers determined he was capable of driving a vehicle. He was released.

When Officer Smith returned to work on her next shift last Friday night, she was confronted by the mayor and council members who demanded her badge.

Volcano causes verbal blast

Haroun Tazieff, a leading authority on volcanos, has been fired as head of a study institute in Paris in a dispute over a volcano that failed to go off. Tazieff, 63, said he was fired because he left the French island of Guadeloupe before the danger from the volcano had passed. Authorities had maintained the volcano, La Soufriere, would pack the force of an atomic blast. Tazieff argued against the evacuation of refugees.

Ford says he'll make tax cut his No. 1 priority

(c) New York Times

Cleveland — President Ford, acting as though he was certain of election in his own right Tuesday, said Thursday that he would make another federal income tax reduction "the No. 1 priority in the next Ford administration."

The President told Midwestern audiences that economic policy was the fundamental issue of the campaign and that Jimmy Carter's "precipitous decline" in opinion surveys was the consequence of the Democratic nominee's reliance on the discredited old formula of "more promises, more programs and more spending."

As Ford met large and friendly crowds at the Scottish Rite Temple in Indianapolis, a downtown square in Cincinnati and an Eastern European neighborhood here, his aides told reporters — without offering supporting data — that private polls placed Ford within striking range of an electoral majority.

Richard B. Cheney, the White House chief of staff, said surveys taken by the President Ford Committee showed Ford and Carter "dead even" in New York, the President "slightly ahead" in Texas and the former Georgia governor slipping badly in five states of the old Confederacy.

But Cheney gave no details of the survey findings and the schedule he outlined for the balance of Ford's campaigning suggested a need to continue politicking in the battleground states of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Ford's stress Thursday on his pledge to reduce taxes if elected was itself a result of his organization's opinion sampling. Cheney said in a brief interview at the Greater Cincinnati Airport.

Ford said the litmus test for all candidates for federal office this year, "from the White House to the House of Representatives," should be a commitment to cut federal income taxes by $10 billion next year.

To cheers of about 1,000 partisans in the Scottish Rite Temple in Indianapolis, Ford said he could not fathom the Democratic-controlled Congress having been "so stupid" as to reject the tax-cut proposal this year.

"We are going to submit the same proposal to them in January," Ford said, sounding as if he meant to have the opportunity. "If they don't pass it in 1977," he said, "we will resubmit it in 1978. If they don't pass it in 1978, I am going out and try to beat them all in the election in 1978."

Ford seeks moratorium on nuclear-reprocessing exports

Washington (UPI) — President Ford asked the world's nuclear nations Thursday to declare a three-year moratorium on the export of reprocessing equipment that can be used to change uranium and used atomic fuel into nuclear weapons.

In a major reversal of domestic policy, Ford also halted U.S. plans for the commercial reprocessing of spent reactor fuel to extract uranium and plutonium and turn it back into fuel. He said no such recycling will take place until international plutonium safeguards are perfected.

Ford's action left open the possibility, however, that a federal demonstration program of commercial reprocessing techniques might be carried out to show one way of stretching uranium supplies. It had no effect on federal reprocessing to produce plutonium for weapons.

Ford has been criticized by Jimmy Carter for not moving energetically enough to control the proliferation of nuclear technology and with it the ability for other nations to build atomic weapons.

Administration officials said there was no connection between the announcement of the new program, which follows two years of preparations, and the upcoming election.

The President said the world's nuclear suppliers — the United States, the Soviet Union, Canada, West German and France — are obliged to make sure that other nations have reliable supplies of fuel for peaceful purposes such as production of electricity. He called for stepped-up U.S. fuel production.

Warning that nuclear suppliers also have a responsibility to stop atomic weapons proliferation, Ford said the United States will, at the minimum, cut off its nuclear cooperation with any nation that violates safeguards agreements.

Undersecretary of State Charles Robinson said the United States was encouraged by preliminary consultations with foreign governments on the new nonproliferation proposal. He said the Soviet Union had indicated its support, although no government had given a firm response.

The White House said the energy Research and Development Administration has been ordered "to begin immediately" a multimillion-dollar study to be carried out during the proposed international moratorium, of whether effective controls can be developed to protect the environment and prevent diversion of plutonium from reprocessed fuel into illicit nuclear weapons.

The President's statement was released in Washington while Ford, campaigning in Ohio, was announcing a $4.4 billion expansion to a nearby nuclear enrichment plant that will create 6,000 jobs had help boost U.S. atomic fuel production.

Ehrlichman goes to prison

Safford, Ariz. (UPI) — Nixon White House aide John Ehrlichman entered a minimum security federal prison at his own request Thursday to begin a 2½ to eight year sentence for Watergate crimes.

Ehrlichman, convicted in two unrelated Watergate trials, became the first of three major Watergate coverup defendants to begin serving terms for conspiracy, obstruction of justice and lying to a grand jury.

John Hadden, superintendent of the Swift Trail federal prison work camp in Safford, said the bearded former domestic counsel to President Richard Nixon surrendered at 10:30 a.m. local time — shortly after two federal judges in Washington approved his request to start serving sentences meted out at a pair of trials that took place in 1974.

Ehrlichman has been free on personal bond, pending appeals.

Hadden said the prisoner requested no news coverage of his entry into the remote federal facility, a minimum security camp with about 350 inmates. Most of them are illegal aliens.

In Washington, Ehrlichman's lawyer Stuart Stiller declined to explain why his client had asked that his personal bond be revoked so that he could enter prison.

Stiller said, however, that Ehrlichman would still press his appeals of the Watergate convictions to the Supreme Court.

His request for an order sending him to prison, which Stiller said was made Thursday morning, does not affect co-defendants H. R. Haldeman and Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, both of whom remain free pending further order of the district court.

Crops surplus first in years

Washington (UPI) — For the first time in five years farmers around the world are expected to harvest enough rice and grain to significantly exceed global food demands, the Agriculture Department reported Thursday.

A monthly global crop summary estimated the combined production of rice, wheat, corn and other grains at 1.298 billion metric tons — 15.4 million tons, or about 1.2%, above a September forecast and 78 million tons, or about 6.4%, above last year's crop.

The harvest forecast is about 3.7% above the previous record crop of 1.252 billion tons in 1973.

The Agriculture Department said world demand for the coming year is expected to total about 1.272 billion metric tons, or about 26 million tons less than farmers are producing. The surplus, which will be stored for later use, is the first major step toward rebuilding overall world reserves since the 1971 season.

In 1975, production of 1.22 billion metric tons narrowly exceeded use of 1.217 billion metric tons. But for the past seven years combined, officials noted, consumption had been averaging 12 million tons a year more than production and reserve stocks had been pulled down to low levels.

The improved crop this year was attributed to generally good weather despite droughts in some regions, and to a continued increase in acreage.

Spud supply said unhurt by exports

Washington (UPI) — American consumers will have "adequate" supplies of potatoes during the coming year despite a sharp upsurge in exports to drought-stricken Europe, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The reassurance to consumers, echoing earlier officials' statements, came in a routine vegetable situation report which also said consumers in coming months will pay more than a year ago for most fresh and processed vegetables.

Analysts said the fall harvest portion of the potato crop is estimated at a record of 300 million hundredweight. Normally, such a large crop would depress farm prices, but experts said prices would be bolstered by currently-heavy exports.

Normally, only 1 or 2% of the potato crop is exported, mainly to Canada. But heavy shipments of fresh, frozen and dehydrated spuds now are flowing to France, England, Holland, Belgium, Italy and West Germany to make up for drought losses and total shipments will go "well above" normal, officials said.

In spite of the heavier exports, the report added the record crop will allow supplies "adequate for normal domestic needs", with about 260 million hundredweight available for food and seed use.

Rhodesian conferees meet in icy silence

Geneva, Switzerland (UPI) — A U.S.-arranged conference to negotiate the transition of power in Rhodesia from whites to blacks opened more than two hours late Thursday with blacks refusing to attend until they received a reply to demands from Premier Ian Smith.

Once begun, the opening session lasted only 22 minutes, in which the five delegations — one white and four black — stared at each other in stony silence while British Chairman Ivor Richard read a statement.

The conference, to negotiate an end to white minority rule in the renegade former British colony and arranged by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger during his African shuttle in September, then adjourned until Friday.

The demands which caused the postponement came from black leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, conference officials said. They said the two men insisted on receiving a reply from Smith to their demands for the release of all political prisoners in Rhodesia before attending.

Smith had sent a reply to Richard Wednesday night but it apparently had not been relayed to the blacks, conference officials said. Smith, in his response on the issue, indicated he would consider the release of some prisoners but that all acts of terrorism in Rhodesia would first have to cease.

The other two black leaders are Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Ndabaningi Sithole, considered to be more moderate than Nkomo and above all Mugabe, who is the most militant of the blacks.

Deficit in trade reported

Washington (UPI) — The United States in September posted its fourth highest trade deficit ever as both imports and exports approached record levels, the government said Thursday.

In its monthly report on trade, the Commerce Department said the nation imported $77.9 million more in goods than it exported last month.

This represents the eighth time this year the United States has registered a balance of trade deficit. In the past three months, the deficits have been substantial.

U.S. imports rose 2% last month to $10.6 billion — the second largest import figure on record. Exports also posted their second highest total ever, rising 1.9% to $9.8 billion.

At this same time last year, the United States was running a trade surplus of $8.09 billion. Currently, the nation has a $3.41 billion deficit.

NU Board of Regents

The terms of half the members of the University of Nebraska Board of Regents expire this year. All four incumbents are running for re-election to a board which governs Nebraska's greatest institution and largest user of tax funds.

In the Third District in northeast Nebraska, incumbent Kermit Wagner of Schuyler faces Newman Grove farmer Merle Hansen. Wagner has been generally supportive of Pres. D. B. Varner's administration. Hansen has been involved in various peace-related causes.

In Omaha's Eighth District, incumbent James Moylan, attorney and lobbyist, faces physician William Minier.

In the Fifth District in south-central Nebraska, incumbent Dr. Robert Koefoot of Grand Island is challenged by Mrs. Fred Seaton of Hastings. Mrs. Seaton, in our opinion, embraces positions which could be damaging to the university system.

In the above races, we think the edge belongs with the incumbents, although Merle Hansen in the Third District might make a more active regent than incumbent Wagner.

In the Fourth District, which runs from Sarpy County on the north down the eastern bank of counties to the southeast corner of the state, skirting Lancaster County on the south and including Jefferson, Saline and part of Seward County, incumbent Robert Prokop of Wilber faces a strong challenge from DeWitt farmer Willard Waldo.

Waldo is a former state senator and is finishing a term on the State Board of Education. Waldo is one of Nebraska agriculture's leading spokesmen, but in his long public career he has also demonstrated an understanding and appreciation of wider concerns.

Prokop's tenure on the board has been marked by an inconsistent performance and the reported tendency to use his regental position to sometimes meddle in day-to-day operations of parts of the university.

We think the election of Waldo, with his distinguished record of public service and statewide standing, would strengthen the board of regents and benefit the university system and the state.

The Star enthusiastically endorses Willard Waldo in the Fourth District University of Nebraska board of regents race.

Panic in the stretch

Congressman John Y. McCollister, his campaign shaken by recent polls showing him trailing Ed Zorinsky in Nebraska's U.S. Senate race, evidences signs of panic during the last week of catch-up campaign hardball.

He has adopted two risky political strategems, and they may backfire.

One, McCollister, who had eschewed personal endorsement appearances in his behalf up until now, was visited in Lincoln this week by GOP vice presidential candidate Robert Dole, who has distinguished himself only by riding the hardest down the long road during this campaign. Twisting and distorting in the Nixon manner, Dole, in this very close presidential race, could snatch the Ford ticket from the jaws of victory. Polls show him to be far less helpful to Ford than Mondale is to Carter. The choice of Dole as running-mate has caused many people to further doubt Ford's judgment.

Dole arrived in Lincoln Wednesday to again apologize for the grain embargo and pat McCollister on the back. Neither play may work.

Two, the McCollister campaign has resorted at the last minute — a symptom of panic — to the kind of advertising meant to scare people.

The infamous advertising suggesting that George Meany would sit in Nebraska's seat in the U.S. Senate if Zorinsky is elected because Zorinsky accepted a small amount of labor donations is an undeserved slur against Zorinsky.

The Omaha Democrat's contributions from labor have amounted to less than 20% of his total.

McCollister will probably benefit from special interest financial backing to a much greater degree and will end up spending nearly twice as much money on the campaign as Zorinsky. What are the voters to make of that?

Most people realize it takes money to run a campaign. If that money is duly reported, if the candidates are honest and open about where their campaign financing comes from, that is about all people ask. To suggest that the money will buy something even before a person is in office is unfair and should be seen as such.

In our estimation, neither McCollister nor Zorinsky can be bought by special interest money. For one to suggest that the other can be bought, as McCollister has suggested, is a cheap, contemptible campaign trick that smacks of panic.

Credit to the girls

NEW YORK — Yesterday was the first anniversary of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act — a federal law which guarantees every woman exactly the same access to credit as a man would have.

Not many of us girls were out celebrating this great step toward equality in borrowing, buying and being billed-to-death, however. This is because most of us didn't even know the act existed; or, if we did, we didn't understand what it means.

"The Act's impact has been negligible," says Ms. Shoshana S. Cardin, chairwoman of the Maryland Commission for Women, "because most women don't recognize its significance. This is extremely unfortunate, because women should establish their own 'credit identities' if they are ever to be economically secure."

In her position, Shoshana deals directly with women's credit needs, and she's out to educate us in the matter of how the act can work for us. "A credit institution can no longer turn you down, or demand extra security or stiffer terms, just because you are a woman. This act makes it unlawful for any creditor to discriminate against any applicant with respect to any aspect of a credit transaction on the basis of sex — or marital status." As an example, in these days of rising divorce rates, "lenders are forbidden to withdraw or refuse credit simply because of a change in marital status, as long as you are still credit worthy. If your ex-husband had a bad credit rating, it can no longer be used to deny you credit — unless you signed jointly for credit, or live in a community-property state."

Obviously, it is important for every woman — whether single or married — to establish her own credit line.

"When you marry, if you already have established a credit history, you will find it easy to change your accounts to your new name — but be sure to make it 'Mary Robinson Smith' rather than Mrs. John Edward Smith."

Phyllis Battelle

This establishes your own credit history so that, in the event of divorce or widowhood, you will not be faced with the prospect of building a new credit record from scratch — at a time when you already have more than enough problems. And remember, if you or your husband allows your joint credit accounts to develop an unsatisfactory credit record, it will apply to each of you — even though only one may have been at fault.

The new act specifically prohibits the traditional practice among mortgage lenders to look only at the man's income in calculating how large a mortgage a couple can afford. "The wife's income was usually discounted entirely, although in cases where this income seemed exceptionally reliable, a portion of it might have been allowed. The new law changes all that — makes the women's income equally important to the man's, even if she has only a regular part-time job. Obviously, this means a great increase in home-purchasing power, and a chance to find better housing for families."

Ms. Cardin contributed her expertise to the preparation of a pamphlet titled "Women: To Your Credit," part of a consumer education effort by Commercial Credit Corporation (one of the nation's largest consumer finance institutions, all of which, naturally, want to encourage more credit buying). In it, she gives other suggestions:

—Establishing a credit history sometimes seems difficult: institutions seem reluctant to extend credit until you've proved your credit worthiness — so where do you begin? The easiest solution is to apply to a local store for a charge account in your own name, and make small purchases you are sure you can afford, and paying each monthly bill promptly. You can also develop a credit record by opening a checking or savings account, and make sure you don't overdraw this account, thus putting a blemish on your record.

—If faced with a financial emergency, it is vital to inform your creditors as soon as possible. Don't just stop paying your bills without explanation. Offer a full and honest explanation — and a partial payment whenever possible.

—Single women often have had a tough time getting credit, especially when they are young, just entering the job market. But under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, your application must be judged on its merits alone — a lender cannot turn it down, or impose higher terms, unless he would do the same for a man with the same income and credit history.

—If your application for credit is turned down, write and request an explanation of the denial. The creditor must answer within 30 to 100 days, and name the credit bureau or sources which provided information used in evaluating your application. If you disagree with the answer, you may ask to review your credit file. If it is found to be incorrect, the credit bureau must remove it from your file and notify all of your creditors who received the incorrect information that the file has been corrected.

—And what happens if you slip up? And there is an unfavorable item in your credit file that belongs there? Chin up. "In most instances, it must be removed after seven years," points out Ms. Cardin. Seven years of bad luck, and bad credit — "Plenty of time," she observes cheerfully, "to improve even the worst mistakes and misjudgments."

Political fates sometimes hang by hair

C. I. Sulzberger

PARIS — During the decidedly mediocre political campaign that is now winding up in the United States, practically every aspect of the candidates — their views, habits and personalities — has been discussed except the length of their hair. We know something about Jimmy Carter's suppressed libido and also something about the kind of moral outlook tolerated in Gerry Ford's family.

We have been told in profusion and also in some confusion about twice-born and thrice-born religious conceptions, about Democratic battling averages and about battered Republican knees. We have heard more than the usually anticipated share of noodleheaded gaffes. But the matter of tonsure has been artfully dodged by experts of each party.

Is this silence occasioned by a bald fear of sudden exposure — the embarrassed realization that a ticket is either too hirsute or not enough? Those who have read their history books are clearly aware of the political implications that can on occasion be read into unfashionable tonsorial style.

The Goths, in ancient Europe, wore long hair while the Romans, who ran the show, clipped theirs. Consequently a haircut meant disqualification from the higher offices of state because the ob-revolutionaries, above all those advocating violence, as exceedingly hirsute: with long locks, beards and mustaches. Perhaps this habit derived from vague recollections of the luxuriant heads of Marx and Engels.

While the hairy innuendo of communism-anarchism was definitively abandoned a few years later — perhaps because there were so many wars in which soldiers were closely shorn to keep them free of lice — hair has revived as a political issue during the past decade or so.

For the most part, the long-haired young men (and even longer-haired young women) — especially in the Western world — have come to be associated with the general idea of protest: protest against practically anything, just so that things don't remain as stodgy as they seem to be.

A cursory glance at some of the leading contenders in next week's election would seem to hint that the Democrats are subtly seeking to emulate the role of the well-tressed Goths who didn't aspire to collaboration with the Romans or to be shaggy protesters of a more recent era who just don't like the way things are going.

Nobody could shout at Jimmy Carter with any justification that he should go off and buy himself a violin case but he is definitely a shagger contestant than President Ford, whose dome is but thinly covered and, at that, by a neatly trimmed vestigial mat. The only really distinguished Republicans with adequate foliage on top whose names come readily to mind are John Connally and young Steven Ford, neither of whose names appear on any ticket.

Face-to-face confrontations arranged between the vice presidential aspirants, Mondale and Dole, would seem to be an approximate stand-off, with Mondale having longer locks falling down his forehead and Dole a bit thicker behind the ears. (I didn't say between them.)

Probably the outstanding Democrat, when viewed through the optic of the hair factor in politics, is Ambassador Pat Moynihan. This genial mugwump, who has hitherto displayed the agility of a dervish whirling between the two major parties, is now seeking to oust the well-clipped James Buckley from his senatorial seat. There isn't the slightest doubt that Moynihan has the head for the job — at least, judging by its outside.

Teacher power: still a long way to go in Montana: While a clear majority of the people of this state are peculiarly sensitive to environmental issues, they have yet to organize effectively to do anything about the practice of clear cutting. Thus, huge chunks of mountainside and tops are being swept clean of timber, and logging roads crisscross the terrain in a pattern that obviously spells too much too fast, even to the uneducated traveler coming in by air over the mountains.

In talking with scores of Montanans from all walks of life, this reporter encountered only two (both were in the timber business) who refused to acknowledge the dangers of clear cutting. Yet, there has been no hue and cry to date strong enough to stop it.

Likewise, Montanans are acutely aware of what can happen when outsiders come in by droves. I did not encounter a single citizen who, given the opportunity, did not express concern about the influx of foreigners, particularly Californians, into their domain. In fact, rumors are widespread that interests from Nevada (gambling is legal in Montana) are moving into one of the state's most scenic and popular lake areas. Many believe that the day may not be far off when the wild beauty of that place could be transformed into a playpen of two- or three-acre zoned houses, hotels and casinos for rich vacationers.

A part of most Montanans dies at the thought, yet there has been to date inadequate inquiry about and less opposition to what appears to be happening.

All of which says a good deal about teachers' problems when it comes to organizing in this state. While the MEA has a fairly healthy chunk of the teacher population as members, it is fair to say that most are not exactly on the front lines in the battle for reforms that would improve their working conditions or increase their salaries.

While MEA's parent organization in Washington, for example, has endorsed the Carter-Mondale ticket, it was apparent at the annual state convention here last week that many of those attending were not only unenthusiastic about the Democratic team but actually favored President Ford. Considering that the MEA is about as liberal a group as you find in Montana, it comes as no surprise that the Republicans are expected to carry the state.

Thus, at least in Montana, the National Education Assn.'s dreams of political power for teachers have in large measure yet to be realized. State leaders are working hard at it, to be sure, and the slope has been attacked. But the top is hardly visible, much less within reach.

May the pigeons fly accurately low

Mike Royko

If Miss Humpley is crazy, then the rest of us are raving loonies. Miss Humpley has learned to shrug off the anti-feeders and their gibes.

"I look upon such people as being inferior," she says. "Most of them wouldn't help another human, much less a helpless animal."

But she recently ran into a problem she can't shrug off.

She was walking from the bus stop toward her apartment, after a day of job-hunting.

On the way, she scattered a few doughnut crumbs on the public parkway.

As she scattered the crumbs, she noticed a figure in the darkness ahead, a man standing on the corner.

When she got closer, she recognized him. It was Barry the Precinct Captain from the 50th Ward Regular Democratic Organization.

She said nothing to him and went on scattering the doughnut crumbs.

Then she noticed that he seemed to be following her and jotting something on a note pad.

"Are you following me?" she demanded.

"No," he said. But it was obvious that he was. And Miss Humpley knew why.

Some of her neighbors object to bird-feeding. They have quarreled with her in the past.

"There's one lady who spends her time with her nose glued to her front window, watching for me. One day I put out some nuts for the squirrels. She came running out and practically took the nuts out of their jaws."

Miss Humpley, who has lived in Chicago all of her life, knows how this city works. This is an election year. And her neighbors have clout with the precinct captain.

But she didn't know what he would do. A week or so later, she found out. She received a phone call from a police sergeant assigned to the city's Department of Streets and Sanitation.

He told her she had been accused of violating the city's sanitation ordinance by scattering doughnut crumbs in public.

Next, she received a couple of official summonses in the mail.

And a few days ago, she went to municipal court to face the charge of scattering doughnut crumbs.

Barry the Precinct Captain was there. So were some of the neighbors.

"They were gloating," Miss Humpley says.

The judge asked her if she pleaded guilty or not guilty.

"Well, if you mean, did I feed some birds, to save them from starving, then I suppose I am guilty."

Put that way, the entire affair sounded silly. So the judge looked a bit uncomfortable and told the clerk to put her down as pleading not guilty.

After he heard the testimony, the judge explained to Miss Humpley that in Chicago it is against the law to scatter food in public, even for birds and other wildlife.

Miss Humpley didn't argue with him, although this sounded strange to her. She has been in Lincoln Park after a summer weekend when the landscape is covered with chicken bones, rib bones, half-eaten hamburgers, hot dogs, booze bottles, French fries, cole slaw, potato salad, and other leftover cuisine. Precinct captains are not sneaking around the park, taking down the names of thousands of slob.

The judge placed Miss Humpley on three months of "supervision." This means that the charge will be dropped at the time, if she doesn't do it again.

But she cannot feed any birds, or she will be in worse trouble.

With a final smirk and gloat, Barry the Precinct Captain and the neighbors left.

After the hearing, Miss Humpley said: "Can you imagine? People all over this city throwing garbage and litter in the streets and parks. People killing and robbing each other. But they treat me like a criminal for feeding birds."

Miss Humpley isn't sure what she will do now. With the cold weather, she worries even more about the birds. But she knows that the 50th Ward Regular Democratic Organization is watching her, ready to turn her over to Streets and Sanitation, which will haul her before the judge.

If she is caught, she will be fined. And since she is almost broke, she won't be able to pay a fine. That would mean jail.

Jail, for feeding birds in winter.

Barry Cohen is the precinct captain. Jerry Huppert is the boss of the 50th Ward.

May pigeons take aim at their heads.

Vapor burnt to save town

Stratton (AP) — The danger of a propane explosion still existed in this southwest Nebraska community Thursday but Fire Chief Victor Kisela said there were no plans to evacuate the town's 490 residents again.

"We've got about 500 gallons to burn off yet, and will probably be burning until sometime Friday," Kisela said. "Our main concern is the weather. If it gets warm, we could have problems."

Townpeople were ordered evacuated for about two hours Wednesday night when a pipe burst while a tanker truck was filling a 1,000-gallon underground propane storage tank at Miller Manufacturing Co. Later, another pipe broke and the threat of a second evacuation in temperatures slightly below freezing hovered over the town shortly after midnight until firemen began burning off the propane.

"We actually only got about 200 people out of town," said Police Chief Ron Longsine. "They moved out real good. We sent 'em east."

Kisela said his department installed a line from the tank to carry the propane vapor into the street, where it is burned at the end of the line.

"As long as the broken line stays frozen, we're okay. But once that propane hits the air, it forms a gas and I'm worried about the gas collecting in houses and exploding," he said.

Kisela said his knowledge about propane was gained mostly through reading and attendance at national fire chief's schools.

"It's about 42 degrees now," he said. "I'm not sure at what temperature we might have a problem. The tank is underground, so that is on our side."

Kisela ordered householders in the vicinity of Miller Manufacturing, a farm implement plant, to turn off their furnaces.

The evacuation was ordered about 9 p.m. Wednesday, during the third quarter of the Stratton-Beaver Valley of Lebanon football game.

The town's hospital recently closed and it has no nursing homes, so the number of bedridden people forced to leave was low.

About 35 night shift workers were on the job at Miller when the first leak occurred.

Charles Kadlecek, representative of Miller, said the plant was shut down as a precautionary measure.

"We expect to be back in operation sometime Friday," he said.

About 100 people work at the plant during the day. An evacuation of Stratton was ordered three years ago when a propane leak developed.

Bond perceives 'new American majority'

By J. L. Schmidt

Star Staff Writer

The development of "a new American majority" may change the face of future American politics.

That was the trust of Georgia legislator Julian Bond's speech to about 500 educators gathered for the 1976 Nebraska State Education Association convention at Pershing Auditorium in Lincoln Thursday morning.

It was also the new name for his national coalition of needs, a theme he brought to town a little more than a year ago in a speech at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The coalition, and other parts of that year-old speech were unchanged, save for a new perspective, aimed at Tuesday's presidential election.

Bond says that the coalition will square off with the problems of racism and economic chaos which have plagued minorities, poor people and the "radicals of the '60s."

Black people have fought for, and won, the front seat on the bus, Bond said, "but what good does the front seat do when the longest ride you're going to take is from the feudal system of the South to the mechanized, high-rise system of the North?" he asked.

"Our general status has improved," Bond said, noting that the battles to vote, eat at lunch counters with whites, etc., have been won, "but our relative position has actually gotten worse."

Infant mortality twice the national average and a shorter life expectancy for blacks were cited as examples.

The major political movement of the '60s died because of "marginal struggles and the general failure (of the movement) to sustain and extend itself," he said.

The presidency has been dominated by men "who have an arrogant contempt for people," he added. Congress is a "bunch of octogenarians made strong by the senility system that lacks the testicular fortitude to fight corruption in their own ranks."

"Only recently, when one of their own was caught ogling a bare breast, did they take action," he said.

Time has shown that "government under pressure would move to become a limited partner, of sorts, with the underdog, but they've got a long way to go," he added.

Bond spent a lighter moment taking jabs at politics and politicians. "I'm proud to know that I belong to the finest body of men that money can buy," he joked.

Bond's speech followed a brief concert by the Northeast High School Conference Choir, opening remarks by Mayor Helen Boosalis and a plea from retired NSEA Executive Director John Lynch for teachers to use the opportunities provided for them during the annual teachers conventions.

Other sessions held in conjunction with the convention included "Simple Math at All Levels," a presentation by Dr. Ruth Hoffman, University of Denver, at East High School, reading teaching, economic literacy, home economics workshops and a session in jazz and modern dance, all held at various schools throughout the city.

Friday's sessions will be highlighted by a keynote address on "Reducing Teacher Frustration," by Don Shaw of the Jefferson County (Denver) Schools at Pershing at 8:45 a.m.

3 more die on highways

Associated Press

Three more persons have been killed on Nebraska's highways, boosting the 1976 state traffic death toll to 323, two more than at this time last year.

The State Patrol identified the latest victims as Paula J. Connell, 24, of Lincoln; Glen Plummer, 25, of Minatare, and Allen F. Hall Jr., 20, of Denver.

The patrol said the Connell woman was killed in a three-car crash on Interstate 80 in Sarpy County about one-half mile west of the Douglas-Sarpy County line late Wednesday night.

The patrol said an eastbound car driven by Ollie Johnson of Lincoln crossed the median and collided head-on with the car driven by the Connell woman. The third car involved, also westbound, was driven by Theodore J. Boesen Jr. of rural Papillion, the patrol said.

Boesen was treated and released from a hospital and Johnson was hospitalized in Omaha.

Plummer was killed about 1:40 a.m. Thursday when the sports car he was driving left a paved county road on the north side of Lake Minatare in Scotts Bluff County and rolled down an embankment, the patrol said. A passenger, Dave Trabert, 26, of Denver, was treated and released for head and shoulder injuries at a Scottsbluff hospital.

Hall died Wednesday of injuries suffered in a crash on Interstate 80, about six miles east of Potter on Monday. Hall's car apparently went out of control, under a cable guard rail on to the south shoulder of the interstate, back through the guard rail and into the median strip, the patrol said.

Meanwhile, Elvis Lambrecht, 15, Omaha, died Tuesday in an Omaha hospital of injuries received in an accident near Crescent, Iowa, last May 19 while he was being pursued by an Omaha police cruiser. Police said they pursued a stolen car from southwest Omaha and it sideswiped two cars before crossing the Mormon Bridge into Iowa. Near Crescent, the car struck a utility pole, police said.

Suit claims error made by Winkle

Associated Press
Gage-Jefferson County Judge Dennis Winkle has been named in a U. S. District Court action in which a Gage County farmer claims he was denied the constitutional rights of due process and equal treatment under the law.

LaVern Meints filed the suit against Winkle and the Gage Implement Co. of Beatrice, in connection with a suit the implement firm brought against Meints in Winkle's court April 2. According to the federal filing, the company sued Meints for $1,220 for service and parts involved in some work done for Meints.

Meints received a summons April 23, and entered an appearance in writing, telling Winkle he wanted a trial.

Meints asked for a trial sometime in August, because Meints would be busy with farm work in May, June and July.

Gage Implement Co. asked for a default judgment against Meints on April 29, and Winkle granted it the same day.

The suit alleges that no notice of the firm's request for default judgment was given Meints, either by the company or Winkle.

The suit says Meints subsequently asked Winkle to vacate the default judgment, but Winkle overruled the motion. Meints' suit said the Gage County sheriff then attempted to levy execution on Meints' property and under that threat Meints paid the $1,220.

The suit against Winkle and the implement company also charges he was not given notice of the default filing because he was appearing in the case in his own behalf.

Alleging that "notice would have been given a party represented by counsel," Meints said his equal protection rights were therefore denied.

Now represented by counsel, Meints is asking the federal court to order Winkle to vacate and set aside the default judgment, and that the $1,220 be turned over to the Gage County court clerk to be held pending trial.

Farmer told not to waste area's water

Clay Center (UPI) — The Clay County District Court, in unprecedented action, has ordered Donald R. Greiss not to waste pumped irrigation water.

Mel Nofke, manager of the Blue River Association of County Groundwater Districts, said the permanent injunction represents the first time action has been taken against an irrigator to prevent waste of underground water.

The court order stems from a 1975 complaint filed by Greiss' neighbors. They alleged runoff onto their land of pump irrigation water was from Greiss' land.

Greiss was twice granted a stay of compliance with runoff laws so he could install control measures, Nofke said.

In August 1976, runoff from Greiss' land was reported again and a lawsuit was filed, Nofke said. A temporary injunction was issued on Aug. 16, followed by the permanent injunction, he said.

Guard activity anticipates snow season

United Press International
The snow season is approaching. And the Nebraska National Guard already is anticipating those days when the car won't start, the snow is too deep and things are just plain blizzard-miserable.

Col. Burl Johnson, Nebraska's deputy adjutant general, said Thursday the Guard already has started to position four-wheel drive vehicles and other equipment at strategic armories across the state, with emphasis on towns along the interstate.

Normally, equipment is centered in Scottsbluff, Kearney, Lincoln and Omaha. Johnson said early positioning is done because there isn't enough reaction time to mobilize equipment from the time the National Weather Service issues a blizzard warning to the point when snow is too deep for long-distance travel.

Johnson said, snowmobile and four-wheel drive recreational vehicle owners have formed volunteer organizations. "They can be quite effective," he said, singling out Lincoln, Norfolk and Grand Island as good examples.

Johnson said once a blizzard watch is issued by the Weather Service, the emergency staff assembles. A watch does not necessarily mean a blizzard is imminent. Johnson said the emergency operation staff simply monitors the weather — ready to move into action when a blizzard occurs.

Lifesaving of drowning group merits heroism award for 3

Hastings (UPI) — Three Lincoln residents Thursday were named by the Nebraska Funeral Directors Association to receive its "Nebraska Hero's Award" for saving three lives in a boating accident at Pawnee.

The association credited Marvin Norman, William Lautenschlager and State Game and Parks Commission officer Dale Johnson with saving the lives of George and Peggy Roby, LaVista, and Frank Anderson, Omaha, all of whom escaped serious injury.

Johnson said the emergency operation staff simply monitors the weather — ready to move into action when a blizzard occurs. In addition to those two agencies, Johnson said, snowmobile and four-wheel drive recreational vehicle owners have formed volunteer organizations.

Food policy said workshop topic

Associated Press
A Nebraska Food Coalition Workshop has been organized and plans to meet Nov. 20 at the First United Methodist Church in Lincoln.

Joe Collins, co-director of the Institute for Food and Development Policy at Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y., will speak at the Nov. 20 workshop. Collins has worked with Francis Moore Lappe on a book concerning food production, supply and distribution.

New emigrants discover Nebraska

Grand Island (AP) — For the first time in years, Marcia Allen doesn't have to work to help make ends meet. And a gun to Dan Allen means hunting instead of holdups.

The former New Jersey residents say it's all part of the "good life" they've discovered since moving to Nebraska in June.

"My goodness, we haven't bought vegetables all summer," said Mrs. Allen. "The neighbors bring over their gardens. It was like coming into a new world."

Dan and Marcia married the summer of 1974, the second time for both. Lured by an article about Nebraska in the National Geographic magazine, they decided to honeymoon in the state. They liked the state and the "pride and individualism" of its natives.

Fed up with holdups (Allen said he was robbed by a teenager on his milk truck route), a high cost of living and violence in the school Mrs. Allen's son attended, the Allens packed up two years later and left Raledon.

"My friends thought I was crazy, coming out here, 50 years old, and no job," Allen said.

Allen found a truck-driving job, his wife joined several clubs and a church and they report her 12-year-old son's grades have improved.

There were other surprises.

The first time she bought groceries, Mrs. Allen said she was surprised that someone was at the check-out counter to unload her cart, bag the groceries and carry them to her car.

The plains of Nebraska have few trees and the Allens say the starkness bothers them at times.

But Mrs. Allen recalled the time her husband called her to the back porch, urging her to "come here, come here, look."

"I ran to look and asked 'what,'" she said. "He stood on the step, looked toward the sunset and threw open his arms and said 'this!'"

Dan and Marcia Allen found a new life

Airmen evacuate burn victim

Rapid City, S.D. (AP) — An elderly Valentine, Neb., man was hospitalized in satisfactory condition Thursday after a detachment from Ellsworth Air Force Base assisted in flying him to a Texas burn hospital.

Four members of the 37th Air Rescue and Recovery Squadron at Ellsworth received an assistance call from the rescue coordination center at Scott Air Force Base, Ill., Wednesday, the base information officer said.

They were asked to fly to Valentine to pick up Glen Stacey, 81, who had suffered severe burns on his upper body when an oil stove he was attempting to light exploded.

The Ellsworth crew flew Stacey to Pierre where a C-9 Nightingale medical evacuation aircraft from Scott AFB flew him to the Brooks Burn Center at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Stacey was hospitalized in the intensive care ward.

Suspect pleads innocent

James Ray Muldrew, 2569 Camden, pleaded innocent in Lancaster County District Court Thursday to a charge that he robbed a Lincoln man on July 19.

Muldrew is charged with forcibly threatening Brady A. Bennett when Muldrew and another man stopped at Bennett's home at 1120 A St. Muldrew and the other man allegedly asked Bennett if they could use his restroom and once inside the house held a shotgun on Bennett.

The two men reportedly tied Bennett's hands and feet and stole stereo equipment, a tape player, rifle and other items, according to the charge.

District Judge Dale Fahrbruch accepted the plea and set the case for a jury trial. The present $5,000 bond was continued.

Public Service Commission 'tends to be an invisible agency'

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Joyce Durand and Harold Simpson are running for...what? Simpson says only about 10% of the southeast Nebraskans he's talked to know what the Public Service Commission is. Yet not even each of those knows what the PSC does, he found.

Mrs. Durand observes that the PSC "tends to be an invisible agency." She cited its importance on Nov. 2 to voters who get their only chance in six years to pick a commissioner.

Mrs. Durand, 40, the Democratic nominee for the PSC 1st District seat Robert Marland will vacate, faces Republican candidate Simpson, 50. Both are Lincolinites.

The winner will join four other commissioners who regulate rates and services of Nebraska telephone companies, the trucking industry, railroads and grain warehouses. Fringe regulatory duties address aviation, taxis, limousines and power lines.

The job pays $20,000 a year through 1982. Mother of three boys aged 14-19, Mrs. Durand has been a PSC employee and department head seven years, and a Democratic Party activist.

Simpson

Simpson, a milling company employee for 29 years, is father of six married children. A state senator in the nonpartisan Unicameral since 1967, he would resign in mid-term for a PSC win, opening his legislative seat to an appointed successor.

Each promises to be "a full-time commissioner."

Mrs. Durand says combined utility bills often rival house payments and far exceed state income taxes a family pays. Simpson too pledges to seek justified rates for the best service.

Both candidates emphasize consumer protection and public interest rather than co-equal ratepayer-industry treatment.

"I don't have to learn the job," says Mrs. Durand, PSC budget-research director since 1970. Simpson says he can learn PSC operating details "quickly," citing his milling background and over-the-road truck driving four years.

Both candidates dwell on phone companies. Mrs. Durand says subscribers often don't get their money's worth despite the industry's "robust financial health." Many companies give "fine service at reasonable rates and they aren't going broke."

"It's just a simple matter of saying no, you don't need any more money" as a prerequisite for improved service. Yet denying needed increases

Campaign '76

"wouldn't serve the ratepayer either," she believes.

Simpson says service complaints he's fielded outnumber phone rate gripes. He finds "a terrible disparity" among towns served by the same company. He advocates comparable service for comparable rates statewide. He criticizes service denials in some areas and multiple-party line perpetuation in others.

Simpson favors auditing all phone company service (not finances) with annual updates.

Regarding trucking, Mrs. Durand favors continued regulation of safety, insurance and rates. But she would allow "free entrance" into the market for natural competition rather than the PSC tending to "create monopolies."

Simpson points out that truck lines prefer to haul commodities cut-rate along prime routes. He'd try to prevent a firm from eliminating a rural route as unprofitable, because only that transportation link keeps some towns from dying.

Each candidate favors a state law to establish PSC regulation of natural gas, now a community-company negotiated matter. But neither candidate advocates regulating electricity.

Both candidates' campaigns are running on small contributions. Mrs. Durand is taking no industry money and will spend about $8,000. Simpson expects to spend from $10,000 to $14,000.

In the other PSC race, Chairman Duane Gay, 44, of Columbus, faces challenger Omaha Donald Jensen, also 44, to represent northeast Nebraska.

Wedgewood area is target of crime prevention effort

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

People living between O St. and A St. from 70th to 84th may not realize it, but their neighborhood is one of Lincoln's highest crime areas.

Last summer more residential burglaries and auto thefts occurred in this area, commonly known as Wedgewood, than in any other Lincoln neighborhood.

Lincoln Police officers John Cripe and Lyle Lacy, who patrol this area between midnight and 7 a.m., have launched a campaign to make the residents of their beat more aware of crime and what they can do about it.

Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. Cripe and Lacy will be on hand at Ruth Pyrtle elementary school to show people how to protect their property and persons.

This special program will give the officers a chance to meet and talk with residents, who are usually asleep while Cripe and Lacy make their nightly rounds.

They will talk about specific instances of theft and vandalism that have occurred in the area, and also give people a chance to see the police department's crime prevention van.

"Most of the things people can do to prevent these crimes are relatively simple," Lacy said.

For example, people should remember to lock their garages and cars at night and not leave valuables in their yards.

To dramatize the problem, Lacy is going to stick small cards bearing his name and an invitation to the Saturday program on any unlocked cars and garages or exposed valuables he happens to find.

With 30,000 residents in the area, the officers hope for a good turnout.

"We want to prove to them by citing local statistics that they have a problem," Cripe said.

An alert citizen is the best weapon against crime, they both agree. People need to know what's happening in their neighbor's yard -- they need to be on the lookout for anything suspicious.

And they need to be encouraged to pass this information along to the police.

"We have to have information in order to solve crimes," Cripe said.

As a result of their campaign Cripe suspects that crime rates will go up at first, then drop considerably.

Second inmate charged in fire

A second woman inmate being held in the county-city jail was charged Thursday with third degree arson for setting a pile of mattresses on fire there last week.

Marie Finnigan, 18, 2240 Lake St., was arraigned in Lancaster County Court for setting fire in the jail last Thursday. Another woman inmate was charged with arson last week following the blaze, which generated more smoke and fumes than fire.

Four women inmates, two nurses and four corrections officers were sent to the hospital for smoke inhalation as a result of that blaze.

County Judge Jeffere Chevront fixed Ms. Finnigan's bond at $1,000. A preliminary hearing date will be set Nov. 16.

McC says 'flip-flopping' Zorinsky hard to pin down

Republican senatorial nominee John Y. McCollister Thursday said his opponent, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, has "flip-flopped on so many issues" that it has been difficult to explain their differences to voters.

But voters should consider their apparent disagreements on defense spending and the proposed Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill before they go to the polls next Tuesday, McCollister told a Lincoln news conference.

Zorinsky told Nebraskans for Peace that he would support a 5% cut in defense spending, the Omaha congressman noted. McCollister supports increased defense spending.

Zorinsky told an Omaha Westside High School audience that he supports all of the Humphrey-Hawkins bill except for making the government the employer of last resort, McCollister said. The congressman opposes the measure.

On both issues, Zorinsky has "flip-flopped back and forth," McCollister said.

Defense spending needs to be increased to improve America's limited response capability, McCollister said.

"We're going to fall behind (the Soviet Union) if we don't do something now."

More funding is needed for the B-1 bomber, for the Trident submarine and for improved research and development, he said.

Soviet spending has vastly improved its military capability, he said, and it is "dangerous" for the U.S. not to maintain and improve its own.

Funding for development of the B-1 bomber is another issue on which Zorinsky has changed his views, McCollister said.

Others, he said, have included gun control, Social Security, the equal rights amendment, U.S. recognition of Vietnam and the role of big labor unions — as well as his political party affiliation.

Zorinsky's "shifts" have "completely frustrated" meaningful debate on issues during the campaign, McCollister said.

As a result, "I think many people believe there are no particular differences between the two candidates," a view which works in the Democrat's favor, he said.

"It's like fighting a windstorm."

McCollister says his three terms in the House provide "a record which shows how I would vote" in the Senate.

And that, he suggested, is "in a way most Nebraskans would approve."

The key to the tight Senate contest is likely to be the 1st Congressional District (which includes Lincoln), McCollister said.

Although he has no definite reading as to how the 27-county eastern Nebraska district will vote, he said, his reception in Lincoln has been reassuring.

"It feels great," he said, "but it's awfully hard to say."

McCollister's support in western and central Nebraska's 3rd District is likely to balance out Zorinsky's support in the Omaha-dominated 2nd District, the congressman guessed.

McCollister will devote much of his final day of campaigning to Lincoln next Monday.

Carter man: ag prices to determine farm vote

McCook — "A decisive factor in the Nebraska farmer and rancher vote Nov. 2 will be the deplorable state of livestock and grain prices, which is forcing many operators to worry about their future," said Erv Friehe, coordinator for Jimmy Carter.

He estimated statewide ag losses for 1976 at approximately $1.5 billion.

Friehe said the effect of the Ford administration's failing to raise grain support prices to match cost of production gives farmers little hope for better prices.

He added that the extended delay and failure to limit beef imports, by the present administration, puts the livestock man in a hopeless position.

Carter has emphasized that as president he would make sure that support prices equal cost of production.

Mrs. Seaton defends right to know

University of Nebraska Regents candidate Mrs. Fred Seaton of Hastings Thursday said a key issue in her campaign is "the people's right to know what is going on at their own university."

Her opponent, Dr. Robert Koefoot of Grand Island, approved of a recent Medical Center plan which would "limit public access to information about the university," she said.

"I want the public to know what outside incomes staff and faculty are getting and I want them to have as much other information about the operation of the university as possible."

Mrs. Seaton is challenging Koefoot for the 5th District seat on the board.

Gauger leads Kossack in campaign spending

Lancaster County Commissioner Jan Gauger spent almost five times as much money as challenger Ted Kossack during the second campaign expense reporting period.

Republican Jan Gauger has spent $2,205 since Oct. 18, primarily for advertising costs, and her financial statement shows a balance of $43.

During the period, Mrs. Gauger collected $525 in donations, all under $100 each, according to the statement filed with the Lancaster County election commissioner.

Democrat Kossack spent $489, primarily for yard signs and newspaper advertising, during the same time period and had $611 left in his campaign kitty.

He collected over $750, primarily in small donations.

The only other candidate for county office who filed a financial statement was Richard W. Gray, candidate for the Weed Control Authority. He listed expenses of $23 and no donations.

The man who's making us proud again.

He grew up during the Depression in Grand Rapids, Michigan, learning early the meaning of hard work.

He waited on tables and washed dishes to earn his room and board at the University of Michigan. There he was voted most valuable player on the football team and elected president of the senior class.

He went to Yale Law School, while holding down a full-time job, and graduated in the top third of his class.

He enlisted in the Navy, was assigned to combat duty, and rose to the rank of Lieutenant Commander.

He returned to Grand Rapids after the war, practiced law, and became active in civic affairs.

He was elected to Congress against heavy odds in 1948, and was reelected 12 consecutive times with more than 60% of the vote.

He worked harder than ever as a Congressman, became a recognized expert in the national security field, and was rated by 50 Washington correspondents as the ablest of the post-war generation of Congressmen.

He was appointed to the Warren Commission in 1963, and was elected Minority Leader of the House of Representatives in 1964.

He was confirmed as Vice President in 1973, undergoing an intensive investigation of his background which brought to light the remarkable extent of his personal integrity.

He became President just months later, and immediately faced a nation that was divided, bitter, shorn of its trust in government. And a nation in an economic recession.

He went to work, turned the economy around, and cut the rate of inflation in half.

He maintained the peace of America by maintaining the military might of America.

He did something especially difficult: He restored the trust and confidence of millions of Americans in their government by conducting an open, honest Administration.

He was able to do this because of his own good character, his own basic decency, which shone through to people everywhere.

He's making us proud again.

Paid for by: Lancaster County President Ford Committee, See Blackman, Chairman, Jim Stuart, Treasurer.

Venezuela uses SUN TV course

Oil-rich but under-schooled Venezuela is getting ideas from Nebraska about how to expand its educational system.

A multi-media accounting course created in Lincoln for SUN (State University of Nebraska) has been redesigned into Spanish and is being used experimentally in Venezuela.

Through television, it will reach many people who have had no access to college before, as part of an all-out effort by the Venezuelan government to "democratize" higher education.

Jack McBride, executive vice president of the University of Mid-America (UMA), which produced the original course for SUN and similar programs in five other states, said he hopes this is the beginning of a trend.

UMA is itself an experiment. Funded largely by the National Institute of Education, this pilot "open learning" program is being watched closely by educators all over the world.

"Open learning" means a university without walls — open to anyone who wants to learn on his own time, at his own pace, away from the campus.

Theoretically, it is available to anyone with access to a television set.

At an international conference on new forms of higher education, which met in Caracas in October, UMA was the United States' showpiece.

McBride presented a paper before more than 1,000 delegates from Latin America, Europe and elsewhere, encouraging other nations to follow the Nebraska model.

Open learning is especially appealing in countries where rapid educational expansion is needed but qualified instructors are scarce, according to Dr. Edward Nemeth, UNL education professor, who represented the U.S. at the conference.

Nemeth, who spent 2½ years in Venezuela in the 1960's helping the government set up a multi-branched university system, said he believes open learning may be more successful there than in the U.S.

In America programs like SUN must compete with traditional universities during a time when college enrollments generally are declining, he said.

In Venezuela and other Latin American countries, there are not nearly enough colleges to meet the demand, and enrollments are increasing.

The accounting course adapted by Venezuela from UMA is a pilot course in what may become a nationwide Open University of Venezuela.

Venezuelans place a high value on television, Nemeth said. Even in shantytowns, houses made of nothing more than cardboard sport TV arials. And even those who don't own television sets have access to them.

They're honeymooning again

Police officers Robert and Lois Stevens Jr. of DeKalb County, Ga., were back on Bourbon Street in New Orleans Thursday honeymooning again. They were married Monday in Atlanta and Tuesday night they returned to duty long enough in New Orleans to chase and apprehend two men following an attempted murder-robbery on the street. He's a detective, she's an investigator.

'Sculpture launch' reslated for today

A "sculpture launch" scheduled for Thursday afternoon in the Sheldon Gallery's sculpture garden has been rescheduled for Friday, at noon and at 2 p.m.

Howard Woody, sculpture professor from the University of South Carolina, will launch "lighter-than-air sculptures," the first he has created in Nebraska.

He has released more than 60 of the sculptures, made of helium-filled balloons, in many parts of the world.

Before the launch, Woody will give a slide lecture at 11 a.m. in the Nebraska Union. An exhibit of photographs of earlier sculptures and maps of their routes is on display in the Union lounge through Oct. 31.

Rail tax assessments to be reviewed

The state tax commissioner's office will review the entire matter of railroad assessments during the next six months, Tax Commissioner Bill Peters told the Lincoln Alliance Thursday.

The alliance, which uncovered some apparent taxing and assessment inequalities on property owned by the Omaha, Lincoln and Beatrice Railroad, met with the tax commissioner in a continued effort to get assessment questions answered.

Peters said that "within our staff limitations," his office will work to clarify the issue over what is terminal property and what should be assessed under the more lenient laws dealing with railroad property.

But the study of this question was not prompted by the Lincoln Alliance, a coalition of community civic, church and neighborhood organizations, he said.

Peter's said the State Board of Equalization voted to pursue the matter during its July meeting.

Attorneys in the Lancaster County attorney's office are also studying the tax laws relating to railroads and County Attorney Ron Lahners said a report should be ready by Monday.

Peter's said his study, which will involve all railroad property, not just the OL&B, will not be completed until May.

City to build cyclists' commuting path

East Lincoln commuters to downtown Lincoln apparently will soon have another transportation alternative. They can take a bicycle trail.

The trail will extend 3.8 miles from 22nd and N to Holmes Lake Park with only eight stops along the way to cross streets.

City officials were given oral assurance that a request for federal funds to build the roadway will be granted, according to Richard Haden of the city engineer's office.

"We are assuming it is for the full amount of $200,000," Haden said.

The cost of the project is estimated at $250,000, so $50,000 must be raised locally.

City officials also are unsure of what design the trail requires and what procedures — public hearings, environmental impact studies — must be completed before work can begin.

The project is one of 41 chosen from about 400 submitted from communities across the nation for the $6 million available for projects to promote bicycling as a safe, viable means of transportation and/or recreation.

City officials thought their application was attractive because it provides a good route for commuters, at a low cost.

The low cost of the path is because it will parallel Antelope Creek, mostly using public land.

The asphalt path is to be eight feet wide avoiding sharp curves and steep hills so bikes can go 25 miles per hour.

An unusual feature being considered for the path is the use of existing giant concrete drainage culverts at the intersections of Capitol Parkway and A and at Randolph and Capitol Parkway so bicyclists can avoid those street crossings.

Stream gauge funding sought

The Nebraska Department of Water Resources will seek an additional $150,000 to install 30 new stream gauges in the statewide network, the Natural Resources Commission was told Thursday.

The program is a cooperative between Water Resources and the U.S. Geological Survey, on a 50-50 funding match. Nebraska now has 160 stream gauges in operation to measure water flow either automatically or manually.

The network needs intensifying, said NRC Executive Director Dayle Williamson, because of its use for water allocation to irrigators, water quality samples and future planning projects.

such as dams

It costs about $5,000 to install a new gauge.

The Resources Commission also directed the department to place one of its staff members on a minimum stream flow study group organized by the Game and Parks Commission.

The study, intended to lead to possible legislation in the 1978 session, focuses on why some Nebraska streams are drying up and would make some provisions for continued minimum flows.

Resources Commission members expressed their desire for input by irrigation districts and water operators, because of future ramifications in acquiring water rights.

Stuntman shoulders his feat

New York (UPI) — Want to learn how to break out of a strait jacket and win immortality? Or to impress your friends? Or because it might be a handy thing to know?

It's simple, says Mario Manzini, a professional escape artist — all you have to do is dislocate your shoulder and have a high threshold of pain.

Manzini performed the feat in exactly 60 seconds Thursday in an Empire State Building elevator which descended non-stop from the 80th floor to the lobby.

According to Manzini, he broke a record for a similar feat set in 1912 by his idol, Harry Houdini, who needed 1 minute and 25 seconds.

According to the Guinness Book of Records, which staged the event, Manzini officially will be listed as the record-holder for breaking out of a strait jacket and handcuffs in an elevator.

Manzini, who is 34 and a muscular 5-foot-8, calmly explained what he had to do to set the record as he was put into the strait jacket and handcuffs.

"There will be a lot of pain, and I hope I can do it without passing out."

He said the high-speed elevator added an extra measure of difficulty during practice. "Going down, my stomach went up, and the pressure on the ears is distracting."

When Manzini was ready, the elevator started down, and 60 seconds later, its doors opened in the lobby. Manzini was prone and panting on the elevator floor, the handcuffs and strait jacket beside him.

Manzini later repeated the feat with reporters and photographers watching at a more leisurely one minute and ten seconds, first wriggling his arms free from the sleeves and then pulling the jacket over his head.

Manzini said that without dislocating his shoulder — which he can do at will — "It would be impossible to escape."

Manzini said he chose the event to mark the 50th anniversary of Houdini's death (Oct. 31, 1926) because the Empire State Building would not let him do what he preferred — dangling upside down in a strait jacket from a burning rope more than 1,000 feet up.

San Francisco — Brisk mornings of autumn around our suburbs at Sinking Inn. I bought and stacked up a half a cord of dry oak wood.

We're still waiting for our half of California to fall into the Pacific. Every now and then, somebody gets his name into the papers by predicting that the San Andreas fault is about to split.

Last predictors were two young men who came to my door on a foggy evening a year ago. They were both named Michael. They sold me a book of tickets for $4.99 which could be exchanged for $25 worth of dry cleaning.

They said "We're just doing this job temporarily so we can leave some money with our folks."

They said: "In a few days we are entering the astral plane. Nuclear tests have cracked the San Andreas fault. Half of California will fall into the ocean."

They disappeared in the foggy night and that was the last I saw of them. The half of California hasn't fallen into the ocean yet.

The two Michaels may be sitting out there on the astral plane watching us. Makes you a little shivery, doesn't it. (Or did someone leave the back door open?)

"He who rides the tiger cannot dismount."

A boy much admired in the 12-year-old set has a father who can burp like a machine gun. Burpity-burp-burp.

It shows how careful you must be in choosing your parents. While other lads must make their way to glory on skateboards, this boy merely sits back and says.

"That's nothing. Do you know what my Dad can do?"

Then he tells them.

Here's to the 12-year-olds who will soon take over. (Just remembered, the 12-year-old became 13-years-old only a few days ago. Show how vulnerable I am when these things slip.)

What have you done with your life, my friend? Can you burp like a machinegun at a moment's notice?

Perhaps not too late. Here's the morning paper with "Job Opportunities."

"Executive wanted in a field that is not crowded for the right man."

Once a publisher sent me a review copy of "How To Be An Executive."

It seems an executive always has a clean desk. No papers. No mess.

"The successful executive has an uncluttered desk. He has a talent for bringing order out of chaos."

I have a desk and have never brought anything out of it in any kind of order. It is that chaotic.

Matter of fact, it got into such a chaos, I don't even work at it. I work on the dining room table. The table gets into some kind of order because we take the typewriter and papers off each evening so we can eat on it.

Thus I am little help to my son. He regards me gloomily. Something he is stuck with. Unable to burp like a machinegun at will. A man with an untidy desk. Obviously not an executive type.

When half of us fall into the Pacific, I expect I shall be the first to go.

Beermann expects 70% to turn out for election

Secretary of State Allen Beermann predicted Thursday a Nov. 2 voter turnout of 70% or 595,000, which would represent the fifth highest in the history of Nebraska general election balloting in a presidential year.

Voter registration totals completed late Thursday show 840,666 Nebraskans have registered to go to the polls from a potential eligible Beermann estimated at 1.1 million. The ratio of expected voters to those who could vote is 59%.

The record total is 823,000 in 1940, when Americans reelected Franklin D. Roosevelt over Wendell Wilkie. In 1960 the Kennedy-Nixon contest attracted 619,000 Nebraskans. The No. 3 mark, 617,000, was also in a Roosevelt election, and the Eisenhower era began after 616,000 statewide votes in 1952.

Beermann said his 1976 prediction exceeds totals in 1964, when 592,000 showed for the Johnson-Goldwater tilt, and in 1972, when part of the 591,000 helped Richard Nixon crush George McGovern.

The 1940 record could have been an 85% to 90% turnout, Beermann said, explaining that 18- to 20-year-olds couldn't vote then and Nebraska's population was less than now.

Some factors which could push a modern-day record, he said, include "a pretty spirited presidential race" and the nip-and-tuck races for the U.S. Senate and 2nd District Congress seats.

The Public Service Commission tussles, "a couple of regents races" and a "lot of local elected offices" on the ballot ranging from mayors to natural resource district directors and technical community college boards all add to the higher turnout than expected nationally, he said.

One other balloting spark is the proposed Amendment 6 to the State Constitution, which Beermann described as "kind of a shoot-out between private and public institutions" for serving handicapped children and college student aid.

The secretary of state also predicted, however, that voters won't break the 800,000 mark. "I checked with several counties at random, and their absent and disabled ballots are off by about a third." For example, in Cherry County, 205 A&D ballots are expected, compared to 308 the last time out.

"In 1968 and 1972, we had a lot of mail ballots coming from Vietnam," he said, accounting for some absentee decline.

"All the national polls seem to indicate some general apathy," Beermann said, noting "some in Nebraska" by the 30% expected to stay at home Tuesday. But that's "not as devastating as nationwide."

Campaign finances closing early gaps

Campaign contributions were evening up Thursday in opponents' races for Lincoln and Lancaster County district seats in the Legislature.

In the 27th District, Sen. Steve Fowler reported $2,144 in contributions during Oct. 16-27, including $500 from the Nebraska State Education Association's political arm and $200 from the Nebraska AFL-CIO. His total receipts to date are $7,817.

Fowler's opponent, Lincoln attorney Don Stenberg, listed $775 in new money, including $100 from a dentists' political action committee. Stenberg has collected $8,056 since his campaign began.

During the second reporting period, which ended five days before the general election, Fowler spent $3,833 in a $7,634 total, while Stenberg spent $1,450 toward a $6,899 total.

In the 29th District, Sen. Shirley Marsh listed total receipts of $5,056 and challenger Ron Wylie, owner-operator of a news service, reported $718 income for the period, part of an approximate $5,900 total.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly in his 25th District re-election campaign reported $2,305, while his opponent, Reginald R. Powers of Elmwood, brought in $127 toward a $2,305 total.

In the 23rd District, Erwin F. Matulka of Valparaiso added $450 to his previous balance of $3,240. Rival Sen. Loran C. Schmit of Bellwood reported transferring $3,000 from a savings account to his committee fund, with a $3,588 balance. However, Schmit has drawn more than $35,000.

In the Public Service Commission races, 1st District Democratic candidate Joyce Durand of Lincoln reported $1,582 income, in addition to her last listing of $4,422. Republican opponent Harold D. Simpson, Lincoln state senator, showed $1,285 in contributions for the period, including $450 from the Nebraska AFL-CIO; his previously reported receipts totalled $7,791.

Higher education not slighted

Just about any way you slice it, higher education in Nebraska has been getting a fair financial shake — comparatively speaking.

Nebraska is not ranked No. 1, but it is among the leaders in tax spending for higher education, according to a recent issue of "The Chronicle of Higher Education."

Only in actual dollar amounts of tax money spent on education beyond high school does

Nebraska rank below the midline for the 50 states

Nebraska's almost $122 million appropriations for higher education this year places it 33rd among the states.

But compared in other ways, Nebraska's public higher education institutions get an above average shake in the tax money comparisons.

Democratic registrations gain but Republicans still dominate Democrats gained slightly in their ratio to Republicans registered to vote Tuesday, compared to the May primary and also the 1972 presidential election.

But Republicans still hold a commanding lead across the traditionally GOP-heavy state, although more Democrats are registered in 15 counties — most in the Omaha-Lincoln metropolitan-dominated counties of Douglas and Lancaster.

The increase in total registrations reported county by county Thursday to the secretary of state was attributable largely to a surge of 18,000 new voters in Douglas County. Lancaster zoomed up by about 5,000 compared to primary totals.

Registered Republicans total 404,861 statewide while Democrats total 388,279. The GOP in May numbered 377,865 and Democrats 358,702. In November 1972, Republicans who registered totalled 401,409, versus Democrats at 370,993.

Republicans gained only 3,457 since 1972, while registered Democrats increased by 17,286.

Nebraskans now counting themselves as independents total 47,296, up from 38,565 in the 1976 primary and an even larger increase from 34,865 in the 1972 general election. The American Party, which had 133 registered last May, now has 230.

The current grand total, 840,666, compares with 807,267 in the last presidential contest four years ago, and with 775,265 in May. Lancaster County ended up with 97,399 total, including 43,852 Republicans and 45,944 Democrats, 7,579 independents and 24 American Party members. Of the two major parties, Democrats maintained their slight edge, by 2,082.

Douglas County registered 82,737 Republicans — 30,555 fewer than Democrats at 112,292. Independents total 13,717 and 12 affiliated with the American Party. The total mushroomed to 208,758, up about 9% from May.

Counties with more Democrats registered than Republicans are Butler, Cass, Cedar, Colfax, Dakota, Douglas, Greeley, Lancaster, Lincoln, Nance, Platte, Saline, Sarpy, Saunders, Sherman and Thurston. Saline County, which includes Crete and Wilber, showed the most marked difference, with Democrats outnumbering Republicans by 4,999 to 2,998.

The whopping increase in Omaha area registrations was partly attributable to heightened interest in the races for Senate and 2nd District Congress, both predicted as photofinishes with the possibilities of Democrats emerging victors. Registrations increased by about 5% in the Lincoln area, also partly lured by statewide races although most district races aren't expected to be showdowns.

Counties with more than 10,000 registered voters include:

Adams, 18,445; Buffalo, 16,667; Dawson, 11,405; Dodge, 20,367; Douglas, 208,758; Gage, 13,320; Hall, 25,668; Lancaster, 97,399; Lincoln, 19,103; Madison, 16,514; Platte, 14,476; Saline, 25,936; Sarpy, 10,150; Scotts Bluff, 19,658.

Osmond firm low bidder

The Nebraska Corrections Department said Thursday J. P. Theisen & Sons of Osmond was the apparent low bidder for the site grading project at the Lincoln Medium-Minimum Security Complex.

Theisen & Sons' bid was $28,443 to prepare approximately 10 acres for spring digging of footings at the 300-acre site adjacent to the old reformatory on West Van Dorn.

Jack Falconer, assistant director of corrections, said the bid was under estimates. It was accepted pending State Department of Administrative Services approval next week.

Other bids opened include Theisen Brothers, Norfolk, $37,263; Negus Sweeney Inc., Omaha, $49,733; Ed Miller & Sons, Omaha, $91,559.

Falconer said the grading work will begin within 10 days and will take about 10 days to two weeks from then to complete.

Architecture consortium invites UNL

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln's College of Architecture has been invited to participate in a national research consortium, it was announced Thursday.

The Architectural Research Centers Consortium, Inc., is a group of schools organized to conduct architectural research of a national scope, said Cecil Steward, UNL college dean.

UNL is one of 14 charter members of the organization, which was spearheaded by the American Institute of Architects Research Corporation, said Steward, who was elected consortium secretary last month.

The organization is based on the premise that significant research grants and contracts will be available in the future for environmental research, he said. In addition, any single architecture or planning program may be restricted by resources, geographical location, size or professional expertise, he said.

Steward also said consortium members had to meet three conditions to join the group, including having a research entity which functions year-round and can contribute to the initial operating expenses of the consortium.

Consortium schools include: Arizona State, Carnegie-Mellon, Louisiana State, Pennsylvania State, Rice, Texas A&M, Washington-St. Louis and Princeton universities; Massachusetts and Georgia Institutes of Technology; and the Universities of California-Berkeley, Michigan, and Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Mills sets up a checkers problem to puzzle out.

Winning at checkers his habit

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

It's nippy enough out to squeeze snowflake portraits out of a slate sky, and yet Lloyd Mills is outside, as he is every morning, hoisting his weatherproof flag in front of his home.

Mills says he likes patriotic things. On the wall, there's a portrait of a bald eagle before an unfurled American flag, painted on velvet. An autographed photograph of Lyndon Johnson sits on his television set. He is a member of the American Legion and has been a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for 25 years.

Mills, 57, has recently returned from Milbank, S.D., where he won the 30th annual checker tournament sponsored by the 7th District of the American Checker Federation. Forty-four persons entered the contest from seven states: North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

But winning checker championships is nothing new for the former chief training officer of the Lincoln Fire Department, who now manages the Pine Lake Golf Course.

He now has won the district title six times. He has won the state checker tournament title 27 times.

Mills now qualifies for the national tournament, which will be held in 1978. He has never played in a national tournament before, but that could change — "I really intend to play in several of them," he says.

Besides, he knows that he can compete with the best of the district players. In 1968, the year he won the district tournament held in Lincoln, he defeated the national checker champion, who was from Springfield, Mo.

He once played the world's champion, Willie Ryan, to two draw games.

Mills said he first started playing while he was a student at Lincoln High School.

In those days, when he was a 16-year-old senior, he thought that winning at checkers involved mostly luck. He said he apparently had a natural talent for the game, or maybe it was just luck, because he defeated most of his high school-age competition.

Then he took on his best friend's father, who was then city champion. The game was disaster; the man "murdered him."

Mills entered the city tournament the next year, but in the "scrubs" class. He did not feel that he could cut the masters, or "topflight," competition. He won first in his class. His prize: a checker book.

"Until then, I didn't know they put out books on how to play checkers," Mills said. "So I studied that darn book. And the next year I was runner-up in the masters class."

Four years later, he won his first state championship.

Mills now has over 100 checker instruction books. He estimates that he has given away another 100 to 200.

One of these books, endless pages of numbers in a looseleaf notebook, costs about $75.

To the student of checkers, the book is a wealth of guidance about the opening series of moves, mid-game strategy, end-game tactics and maneuvers that experts call traps, tricks and shots.

Mills also plays chess. Although many claim chess is the more challenging of the two games, Mills says both are "equally tough."

But, while Mills said he senses interest in chess has increased since Bobby Fischer, he also thinks that among young people, interest in checkers has declined.

"There are so many other things for kids to do these days," he said. "Today they have television. When I was a kid during the '30s, the only thing we had was the crystal set."

How would you like to be rich?

By Roger Simon
Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Do you sincerely want to be rich? Not just limousine-rich or yacht-rich, but really rich?

Rich enough to run naked through a roomful of thousand-dollar bills? Rich enough to carpet your rec room in mink? Rich enough to enter any hotel in this country and order mixed nuts from room service?

If the possibility of vast wealth offends you — stop reading now!

If it doesn't, then meet C. Ionescu Tulcea and Virginia L. Graham.

C. Ionescu Tulcea is a research mathematician and professor at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. He used to teach mathematics at Yale and the University of Pennsylvania. As a young mathematician in Romania he published a little paper on the theory of probability that made him famous.

Virginia L. Graham is president of Dynamic Data Corp. of Chicago. She holds a doctoral degree in mathematics. She is a professional violinist. Her company uses computers to analyze the stock portfolios of various banks and then tells them what they are doing wrong.

What Prof. Tulcea and Miss Graham also do is gamble. To be specific, they play blackjack in casinos all over the world. To be more specific, they win at blackjack in casinos all over the world. To be even more specific, they never lose at blackjack in casinos all over the world.

"We have developed a system based on the mathematical laws of probability and checked by computer," Miss Graham said.

"Our system is not based on luck, but on mathematics. It is infallible. In the long run, you simply cannot lose."

Miss Graham and Prof. Tulcea were sitting in a little room waiting to play me for $5,000. The publisher of their book, Van Nostrand Reinhold, had issued the challenge.

I told them that I did not have $5,000. I tried to take it on my expense account, but my editor did not believe that I took a cab to Ethiopia or bought lunch for the State of Michigan.

"You can read the book and learn our easy system in two days," Miss Graham said. "That will let you have fun and not lose too much at the casinos."

"You can learn a winning strategy in a week. You will win slowly, but you will win. It takes study. It takes intelligence."

"For the master strategy in our book, it takes two months of study. And for the top strategy, the strategy not in the book, it takes four to five months of study."

"And, uh, how much could I win?" I asked with a laugh. "A million dollars?"

They looked at each other. "Well, actually," said Prof. Tulcea, "much more."

"How. Much. More?"

"Well, there's no actual limit. By making small bets of between $10 and $50, you could win, umm," he said, looking at the ceiling for a moment, "say a quarter of a million dollars in a month."

"Does that mean a million dollars in a year?" I asked.

"Let me guess," he said. "Math was not your favorite subject in school."

I sat there for a second waiting for the hitch to come. The little thing that could keep me from making a fortune. It came.

"There is just one problem," the professor said. "The casinos won't let you win that much and, also, they cheat."

"That's against the law?" I shouted.

"They can't do that?"

They smiled. "It happens all the time in Vegas," the professor said. "As soon as we start winning, they figure out that we are using a system and they throw us out. And it is very easy to cheat in blackjack, also. I'll show you and I'm not an expert."

And then this professor of mathematics proceeded to pull cards from the bottom of the deck, from the middle and take peeks at almost any card at will — all while I was looking at him, unable to see a thing.

"We try and win slowly and then lose a little if they suspect us," Miss Graham said. "If we see they are cheating, we leave immediately, without complaining."

Contrary to popular belief, Las Vegas casinos are not run by the League of Women Voters. They are run by men who would gladly do a tap dance on your windpipe if you refuse to leave when they tell you to.

"But if you find a casino that will let you play and one that doesn't cheat, you cannot lose with our system," Miss Graham said. "It is impossible. You will not win every hand, but in the long run, you cannot lose."

I asked how two nice people like them got mixed up in a business like this. "How does anyone get interested?" Miss Graham said. "You want to make money."

"And I don't like to gamble," she said. "The stock market is a gamble. But blackjack. Well, blackjack is different."

'Little Boy of Brussels' not universally accepted

Brighton, Mich. (UPI) — James Meier considers his replica of the "Little Boy of Brussels" a work of art. But to some townfolks, it's downright indecent — the ultimate in bad taste.

The 2-foot-tall, blue-grey statue depicts a little boy relieving himself. Meier has it perched in a fountain surrounded by red, white and blue petunias outside his downtown gas station in this rural community 40 miles northwest of Detroit.

He has received complaints about the nude statue from parents who consider it flagrantly indecent and fear their children will mimic the statue's behavior in their own front yards.

"They call it a piece of art, but a little 4-year-old boy doesn't know it's a piece of art," said Connie Barnes, one of the statue's most vocal critics.

"A little boy thinks it's something he should be able to do in public."

Meier, a 50-year-old Swiss-born father of five, refuses to be intimidated by the protest.

"Nothing will convince me to take it down," he said. "This is history, and people learn from history. There are statues of naked men and women all over the world that are accepted, so this isn't going to corrupt any little guy."

Meier bought the statue two years ago for $25 to beautify his gas station.

There's a story behind it.

Two centuries ago in Brussels, Belgium, a nobleman's son vanished. The father searched frantically for days, convinced his son had been abducted. He finally found the boy, unharmed but stark naked and urinating into the gutter on a narrow street.

Wishing to memorialize the joyous moment, the nobleman commissioned an artist to create a statue of his child exactly as he was found. It now stands on a busy Brussels street corner and is a standard tourist stop.

Reader defends 'Pushover' as open and affectionate

The Lincoln Star

Friday, 10/29/76 • Page 19

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with your answer to the 47-year-old woman, signed PUSHOVER, who described her date as the kind of man she'd marry, even though she went to bed with him on their first date. She regretted having yielded so easily, thinking that now she may not be "marriage material."

You said a man may want a pushover for a date, but not a wife. That's upholding a double standard!

I would hope that the man would appreciate her as a sensitive, affectionate woman ready to act on her own basic needs. I would hope, also, that she would have a little more pride than she seems to in her honest desire for fulfillment and closeness. If she did, she might be asking herself whether a man who did not appreciate this in her would be the kind of man SHE wants to marry.

If I were testing for marriage material, I'd score affection, honesty and openness a lot higher than game-playing and holding out.

ALSO 47

DEAR 47: What I call caution, modesty and restraint on a first date you see as "game-playing and holding out." I prefer the former, and I think most men do, too.

DEAR ABBY: There is a simple, foolproof way to pay your restaurant check when you are consistently ignored by the management and waiter after you are long finished with eating and would like to leave. I first used this method at the Ft. Riley Officers' Club, but it works in almost any kind of establishment from Howard Johnson's to the Waldorf.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

You simply draw a reasonable facsimile of your restaurant check on the tablecloth or placemat. If you know what you owe, fill it in. If you don't, write in what you were served, sign your name, print your name and address and note how long you waited.

If the management has the guts to send you a bill instead of an apology, you can then pay it. W.T. RABE

(P.S. The cavalry officer running the Ft. Riley Club requested that I pay $2 for the tablecloth, which I did. I then insisted that I owned the tablecloth and asked him to cut out the check, which I framed. He finally thought it was funny, too, and pinned the tablecloth with the hole in it to the wall of his pantry for his help to see.)

DEAR W.T.: That might have worked at the Ft. Riley Officers' Club back in the days when a tablecloth was $2, but I don't recommend that stunt today at the Waldorf or any other posh eatery.

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended the wedding of a dear friend. It was the second marriage for both of them.

The bridegroom's married daughter attended the wedding dressed completely in black. She wore no jewelry whatsoever and all during the ceremony, she wept so uncontrollably she had to be comforted by relatives.

What would you make of such dress and behavior?

WEDDING OR FUNERAL? DEAR WEDDING OR: Were I rating her joy on that occasion, on a scale of one to 10, I'd give her a zero.

Dear Abby: My husband and I are in disagreement over something and want you to settle it.

When someone comes to our door asking for me, my husband will invite him (or her) in, and he sends them to whichever room of the house I happen to be in at the moment.

He's sent people to my bedroom when I'm lying down! He has directed them to the basement while I'm putting up pickles. He's even invited them to join me in the kitchen while I'm mopping up the floor!

Some of the people he's invited in I hardly know, such as the Avon lady.

He is a perfect gentleman otherwise, but now that he's retired and home all day, this habit of his is getting me nervous. We've been married 43 years, and this morning he sent a magazine salesman into my bedroom while I was dressing! Please help me.

FURIOUS

DEAR FURIOUS: You've told your husband what I would have told him. Now it's two to one.

What would you bid now?

1. Double. The hand is too

strong for an overcall of one spade, and the best way of representing your actual values is to start with a takeout double. If partner responds in clubs you retreat to spades, and this will picture your values fairly well. More often than not, a one spade overcall is based on a hand that would not qualify as an opening bid.

2. Four hearts. This may seem to be an underbid — since there are good prospects for a slam — but the impetus should come from North. Remember, you've already shown a very good hand by bidding three diamonds before raising hearts. In effect, you've identified the singleton club, as well as other excellent values, and should leave the rest to partner.

If North has the A-K of hearts and five of diamonds, or K-J of hearts and both minor aces, he will almost surely bid again.

3. Double. Again your hand is too good for a simple overcall. You therefore double for takeout, indicating an opening bid with support for both spades and diamonds.

4. Pass. Apparently, North wants West to play the hand at two clubs doubled, and there is no good reason to overrule him. You'll probably collect 800 or 1,100, since you have greater strength than partner has a right to expect.

It is true that when North doubles he has no idea your hand is as good as it is, but that is not a valid reason for taking him out of the double. He will learn soon, after he collects a juicy penalty, that you had extra values for your opening bid.

Market backs off slightly

New York (AP) — The stock market backed off slightly in an erratic session Thursday as Wall Street looked ahead to Friday's government report on leading economic indicators.

The Dow Jones 30 industrial stocks, up 18.12 in the two previous sessions, slipped back 3.49 to 952.63.

Declines just barely edged past advances at the close of the New York Stock Exchange, after trailing for most of the session.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials eased 26 to 113.64, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down .15 at 101.61.

The Dow traced a zigzag pattern through the day—up 3 at the outset, down 4 1/2 in the morning, and up a fraction again at mid-afternoon before trailing off once more toward the close.

Analysts noted that traders,

Dow Ind. —3.49

however pleased they might have been with the rally that began on Tuesday, seemed skeptical about its durability because of the slow pace of trading that accompanied it.

Before the market's opening Thursday, Chicago's Continental Illinois National Bank announced a reduction in its prime lending rate from 6 1/2 to 6 percent, effective Friday.

Cuts in the basic lending charge on blue chip loans are traditionally a plus for the stock market. But this time investors also seemed to see in the news a sign of a sluggish economy, reflecting slack demand for money.

During the day Wall Street also was bracing for the September reading on the government's leading-indicators index, due on Friday.

It was widely expected that the index, designed to detect future economic trends, would show its second consecutive monthly decline.

A principal drag on the Dow average was General Foods, which gave up more than 2 points. On Wednesday the company projected lower earnings for the current quarter.

General Motors, which posted better-than-expected third quarter profits late Wednesday, touched a three-year high early in the session, but later slipped back in profit taking to finish with a fractional decline.

The biggest loser on the active list, Hughes Tool, tumbled more than 5 points after a delayed opening. On Wednesday the company reported sharply lower quarterly profits.

Net taxable retail sales in of 1976 totaled more than $1.6 million, representing a 17 1/2 increase over the same three-month period in 1975, the University of Nebraska Bureau of Business Research said

Thursday.

The bureau said the 1976

second quarter growth is "well ahead of all quarters of last year, and the 1976 year-to-date, six-month volume is 19% ahead of last year's."

The bureau said the increase represents a "favorable situation" because the physical volume of aggregate and per capita sales exceeded that of the same quarter last year by about 12 percentage points.

In addition, the bureau said 17 of the state's 26 planning and development regions had year-to-year second quarter changes that were above the 17.3% state increase. Four had increases between 27 and 32%, the bureau said, adding all regions had actual gains in dollar volumes of sales.

However, the bureau said,

both Region 1 — Douglas and

Sarpy Counties — and Region 2

— Lancaster County — lagged behind the state's growth. Most of the other regions that lagged were in the western part of the state, the bureau said.

NU, Black Shirts picked to rebound against KU, 28-10

Nebraska has always taken pride in its defensive football unit. The 'Black Shirts' of recent years are at the top of the list. Even after suffering through a 34-24 defeat at the hands of Missouri last week, the Cornhuskers still lead the Big Eight in three of four defensive categories — defense against the rush, total defense and scoring defense.

But beware. The Huskers have the dubious honor of facing another second-string quarterback this week when they travel to Lawrence to tangle with Kansas.

In last week's four Big Eight games, every one of the winning quarterbacks was either No. 2 when the season began, or had lost his starting job and came off the bench to direct the victory.

Missouri's Pete Woods did in Nebraska, just as he whipped Ohio State earlier, after replacing the injured Steve Piskiewicz.

Kansas, 0-2 in league play behind the touted Nolan Cromwell, started Scott McMichael for the first time and came away with a 24-14 decision over K-State.

The Huskers aren't likely to be lulled to sleep because a reserve quarterback is in the Jayhawk lineup. They learned their lesson.

Nebraska has defended Kansas well in recent years. The weather report is for a crisp, clear day, moderate temperature and sunshine. That adds up to a good passing day for Husker quarterback Vince Ferragamo and a 28-10 Nebraska victory.

Iowa State's surprising Cyclones, who were pushed off course by a rampaging Buffalo last Saturday in Boulder, ought to get back on the track by blowing past Kansas State when they return to Ames Saturday.

ISU has displayed an explosive offense behind the quarterback tandem of Wayne Stanley and Buddy Hardeman. They'll prove too much for the Wildcats' excellent defense, which isn't carrying the load as well as it did a year ago. Iowa State, 34, Kansas State 14.

The other two Big Eight games this weekend fall in the "tossup" class. Don't bet the homestead on the outcome of the Missouri-Oklahoma State or the Colorado-Oklahoma games unless you're prepared to camp out in a tent for the rest of the winter.

Missouri may have knocked off USC, Ohio State and Nebraska on the road already this fall — and the OSU game is in Stillwater — but the Cowboys are sky-high after dumping cross-state rival Oklahoma at Norman last weekend.

Sports Signals

By Virgil Parker

The bookies give Oklahoma State a slight edge on the basis of the "home field" advantage, but I like Missouri in a squeaker.

After all, the home field hasn't meant much in the Big Eight so far this season. After three weeks of play, the count is 9-3 in favor of the visitor. It's been 3-1 against the home team each week.

If Missouri comes through and Oklahoma bounces back against Colorado at Boulder, combined with a Nebraska win on the road and an Iowa State victory at home, it'll be another 3-1 ratio this Saturday.

Barry Switzer's Sooners have only lost two games in the four years he's been at the Oklahoma helm. That doesn't sound like a record which will spell two losses in a row.

Colorado has had trouble winning the "big" ones against Nebraska and OU for years. The Buffs haven't demonstrated the ability to change that pattern despite a wealth of talent.

I'll take Missouri, 35-28, and Oklahoma in an even closer decision, 28-24.

The front-runners in the nationwide top ten polls aren't going to be derailed Saturday. No. 1 Michigan will romp past Minnesota, while Pittsburgh (No. 20) should have even less trouble with Syracuse.

Here's a look at other conferences and areas:

Big Ten: Michigan over Minnesota, Ohio State over Indiana, Iowa over Northwestern, Michigan State over Purdue, Illinois over SMU, Houston over Southwestern, Texas Tech over Texas, Texas A&M over Texas Tech, TCU, Arkansas over Rice.
Southeast: Alabama over Mississippi State, Florida over Auburn, Georgia over Cincinnati, LSU over Mississippi, Maryland over Kentucky.
Pac Eight: USC over California, Stanford over Oregon State, Washington State over Oregon, UCLA over Washington.
East: Army over Air Force, Dartmouth over Columbia, Harvard over Brown, Princeton over Penn, Yale over Cornell.
South: Duke over Georgia Tech, Florida State over Clemson, Tulane over Memphis State, South Carolina over North Carolina State, Virginia Tech over West Virginia, Wake Forest over North Carolina.
Midwest: Notre Dame over Navy, Miami, O., over Toledo, Tulsa over Louisville.
West: Arizona State over BYU, Arizona over Utah, San Jose State over Fresno State.

NU freshmen to play on turf

Nebraska's freshmen football team played its first three games this fall on the AstroTurf of Memorial Stadium.

The Cornhusker yearlings go on the road for the first time Friday. A special treat? Only if playing on a grass practice field that doesn't even have any temporary bleachers falls in that category.

Coach Guy Ingles' frosh, boasting a 3-0 record, travel to Lawrence to play the Kansas Junior Varsity. Kickoff is set for 1 p.m. The game was originally scheduled for the Jayhawk regular varsity stadium.

"Coach Bud Moore (of Kansas) told me that he wants the main field available for his varsity team to practice on," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne says. "We always work out at halftime of the freshman game."

Osborne adds, "Friday is just a limbering up drill. But Moore says Kansas goes through a more extensive workout."

Osborne says he offered to pay the travel expenses of the Kansas JV's to have them come to Lincoln and play on a good field, but the offer was declined.

The Nebraska frosh have beat the Kansas State JV's, 34-6, the UNO JV's, 43-0, and the Missouri JV's, 33-14. Nebraska is the only school in the Big Eight with a team comprised exclusively of freshmen.

Kansas is 0-2 for the year after losing to Missouri, 34-20, and to Washburn University, 21-20.

Pacing the Huskers are I-backs Tim Wurth, Frank Taylor and Glen Lewis, along with tight end Junior Miller.

Wurth has gained 318 yards on 49 carries, followed by Taylor with 217 yards on 24 totes and Lewis with 159 yards on 28 carries. Miller has caught 11 passes for 123 yards.

"Considering that we have been playing against JV teams that have players who are older than our boys, we've been doing very well," Ingles feels. "I just hope we can continue with that same kind of fine play down in Lawrence Friday."

Following the clash with KU, Nebraska's next freshman game is Nov. 12 at Ames against Iowa State.

Scheduling problems hit NU spiker Kruger

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Ask the kids at Lincoln's Brownell Elementary School, and they will tell you the best hooky player around is teacher Janice Kruger.

The students also will quickly point out that Kruger is one of the best volleyball players you'll find.

Kruger, a senior at the University of Nebraska, is student teaching at Brownell this semester. She is also a co-captain on the undefeated Nebraska volleyball team. The combination can cause problems.

"Because of our schedule I've missed a lot of teaching," Kruger admitted before Wednesday afternoon's practice session. "It's been tough trying to keep up with my classroom work, make up the missed teaching and keep up with volleyball."

Despite the conflicts Kruger wouldn't have it any other way. She's doing what she loves — playing volleyball.

"The increased schedule is one of the biggest improvements I've seen since I've been at Nebraska," Kruger said. "When I was a freshman and sophomore, we played around 27 games a year. We've already played 30 games this season and the season is only half over."

The first 30 matches have been a breeze for Kruger and her talented teammates. The Cornhuskers have won all 30 matches and, almost unbelievably, have dropped only a single game during the streak.

Coach Pat Sullivan will take the squad to Ames, Iowa, Friday for the Big Eight Conference tournament which runs through Saturday. Nebraska will face Oklahoma State in the first match.

"I think we will do quite well in the conference meet," Kruger confidently predicted. "I'll be disappointed if we don't win it."

Confidence has always been a key for Kruger since her high school days in Randolph. She began her competitive volleyball career at Randolph Junior High and played four years in varsity competition.

In addition to her high school and college experience, Kruger plays the game nearly year round. When the collegiate season ends she joins the Lincoln Volleyball Club. She also attends volleyball development camps in the summer.

"I think I can safely say I don't miss more than three weeks out of the year of playing volleyball," she said.

Wayne Gonyea, a veteran coach in the various volleyball leagues around Lincoln, has high praise for Kruger's ability.

"Janice Kruger can do it all," Gonyea said. "If you want the best spiker she's the one, if you want the best setter she's the one, if you want the best server she's the one. She is a complete volleyball player."

Kruger's teammates recognized her talents when they selected her as co-captain this season along with Marsha Rupert.

"It's a great honor to be captain," Kruger said, "but there is a lot of responsibility involved. I try to handle some of the problems on the team that maybe the coach isn't involved in. A girl might bring her problems to me and then I pass them on to Coach Sullivan."

With a long-range goal of coaching college volleyball, Kruger's immediate plans include a trip to California. The Nebraska team will depart Sunday for California where they will play a rugged schedule including defending national champion, UCLA.

"I'm sure some of the younger members of our team will be intimidated when we go to California," Kruger said. "After all, that's where everyone thinks of when they think of volleyball. But I'm convinced we can play well out there."

Healthy Huskers ready for Kansas battle

Injuries, or the lack of them, was the biggest news to come out of Nebraska's football camp Thursday afternoon.

As Coach Tom Osborne put the final touches on his Cornhusker squad's preparation for Saturday's Big Eight clash against Kansas in Lawrence, he noted the health of his squad.

"This is probably the best shape we've been in this season including the LSU game (the season-opener)," Osborne said. "We had to leave Curtis Craig home from the LSU game and had a couple other guys hurting."

The only frontline player who will not make the trip is I-back Dave Gillespie. Gillespie, who has been battling a hamstring injury the entire season, aggravated the injury again this week.

"He (Gillespie) pulled it again Tuesday," Osborne said of the senior speedster from Saratoga, Calif. "He was just running on the sideline before practice when it happened."

Osborne pointed out that his six other top backs were all in good shape including fullback Dodie Donnell and I-back Monte Anthony. Both players have sat out games this year with various bumps and bruises.

"This will be the first game we won't have someone playing hurt," Osborne said. "Clete Piller, for instance, has played in the past although he was hurt."

Osborne announced his 55-man traveling squad for the trip with kicker Ron VanderMeer the only notable addition.

"Ron will be used primarily for kickoffs," Osborne said. "And he will backup Al Eveland for extra points. Ron has been doing a good job and it's always good to have a second kicker along."

VanderMeer alternated kickoffs with Eveland last week against Missouri. VanderMeer was used against the Tigers when Nebraska was kicking off with the wind.

Osborne said he is pleased with the squad's attitude coming off the 34-24 loss to Missouri.

"I think the attitude has been very good all week," Osborne said. "We know we are in for a dogfight the rest of the way."

The Cornhuskers will depart Lincoln by bus Friday morning at 10 p.m. and will return to Lincoln immediately following the game Saturday.

Liquor causes stadium woes

Boston (AP) — The owners of Schaefer Stadium, home of the New England Patriots of the National Football League, blame the fan violence following the recent Patriots-New York Jets night game largely on hard liquor.

Phil D. Fine, managing trustee of Stadium Realty Trust, also said the coverage in the news media of the incidents on Oct. 18 was blown out of proportion.

"To isolate one game out of 65 at the stadium and to say that caused massive problems... is unfair," Fine said at a news conference Thursday.

Twenty-six persons were arrested on various charges following the Monday night, nationally televised game won by New England 41-7.

Fine said the Patriots management reported that thousands of empty liquor bottles were found in the stadium. Only beer is sold or allowed legally during a game.

He said that while there were 51,000 spectators in the stands, an average of six-tenths of a cup of beer was sold per person. Gross beer sales for the night were $29,888.80, the lowest of the previous four games this season.

Tuesday, the Foxboro Board of Selectmen voted to ask Canteen Corp., which handles the concessions, to voluntarily sell beer only in concession areas, not in the stands.

Fine said Canteen has agreed to do this, but he emphasized that Stadium Realty has no say in whether the request should be honored.

Regardless of the outcome of Friday night's final intra-city football game between Lincoln East and Lincoln High, Larry Frost will have a unique feeling, walking across Seacrest Field to meet Lee Zentic.

Frost, Lincoln High's first year head coach, still calls East's veteran coach "Mr. Zentic."

"The players will have an easier time going after East than I will," Frost admitted. "I sort of face an identity crisis. I student taught under Mr. Zentic. The front part of my playbook comes from him. He's helped me install the veer offense here. I owe a lot to him."

As much respect as he holds for Zentic, Frost doesn't underestimate the value of Friday's game, even though no conference championship or state playoff berth is at stake.

"This game is extremely important to our whole program," said Frost, who has surprised everyone in leading the Links to a 4-3 record in his first season as head coach.

It is important for our school's confidence and it is important for our respectability," he added. "We were really discouraged with our effort last week (in a 12-3 loss) at North-Platte."

"We just plain had a poor performance out of our offensive line," Frost said. "We were not mentally prepared to play when we should have been at the peak of our potential."

In no way is Frost taking East lightly because of the Spartans' lackluster 2-6 season record. "No one has beaten them by more than two touchdowns," he pointed out, "and anytime you play Lee Zentic and Lyle Sittler, you better be as prepared as possible or they will beat you."

East has lost three straight games, but its defense has given up only one touchdown in each of the last four games. In the game before that, the Spartans' gave No. 1 Ralston its greatest challenge of the season before losing, 15-10, on the road.

"We haven't been out of any game we've played," Zentic said. "We're not winning, but we've been playing better ball every week. Improvement means something."

East has suffered most on the scoreboard. The Spartans have scored only 40 points in their last seven games since a season-opening 21-7 win over North Platte.

"We've been able to get the ball down to playoffs, closes the regular season Saturday night at Seacrest Field against Papillion (5-2-1).

"Papillion is an excellent football team," Southeast coach Frank Solich said. "We're not approaching this game any differently because we've already qualified. We cannot afford a loss in momentum, if we expect to compete well in the playoffs."

Pius X wins, hopes for playoff berth

Omaha — Lincoln Pius X didn't spend one second celebrating a 28-23 win over Omaha Cathedral last Thursday night.

The Thunderbolts, the No. 3 team in the Sunday Journal and Star, were too involved with assessing their chances of making the state Class B playoffs.

It boils down to this. If Nebraska City (5-3) upsets Plattsmouth (4-0) Friday night in a Twin Rivers Conference matchup at Nebraska City, Lincoln Pius X will represent district 1 in the state playoffs.

If Plattsmouth ties or wins, the Blue Devils will edge the three-time defending state champion Thunderbolts for that honor.

"We'll just have to keep our fingers crossed. A lot of our fans plan to drive to Nebraska City and pull for the upset," Aldrich said, "but I'm going to try to figure out someone to scout in case we do get in there again."

The win over Cathedral gives Pius X a final 43.1-point average, according to the Nebraska School Activities Assn. (NSAA) district playoff formula.

A Plattsmouth win would give the Blue Devils a 46.3 average. A tie would mean a 45.2 average and still edge Pius X out. A loss would drop Plattsmouth's final average to 42.2.

"I think the NSAA has to re-evaluate its system," Aldrich said. "The Lexington game (a 28-25 loss) cost two good calibre teams way too much."

Pius X finished the regular season with a 7-1 record without the services of standout fullback-linebacker Dave Egge.

"His back felt sore last week in the Council Bluffs St. Albert's game," Aldrich noted. "We took him in to get x-rayed this week and found out he fractured a vertebrae in his lower back. He's wearing a brace."

Pius X rallied from a 23-21 deficit with 5:55 left in the game.

After Cathedral's Mike Babe returned a Pius X kickoff 82 yards for a touchdown, the Thunderbolts took the ensuing kickoff and drove 65 yards for the final score.

Quarterback Pat Heng had rushes of 23 and 13 yards to spark the drive and connected with Mark True for a 29-yard pass that set up Tim Alfonsin's second touchdown and the win for the 'Bolts.

"We had scouted them and I knew they were a good team," Pius X coach Vince Aldrich said. "But we had a couple starters out and that was the difference, I think."

In addition to Egge's absence, Jim Eliener was unable to help the Pius X defense.

Cathedral opened the scoring with a 14-yard pass from Ted Rohan to Dan Livingston in the opening quarter. But Pius X tied the score on Alfonsin's first score, an eight-yard run.

Then Mark Bruckner plunged over from the one to give the 'Bolts a 13-6 lead. But, with just 44 seconds left before the half, Livingston tied the score with a 19-yard run.

Neither team scored in the third quarter, as field position plagued Pius X during the period.

"We were penalized for piling on at the end of the second quarter so they kicked off from our 45. That kept us in a hole the whole third quarter," Aldrich said.

Parker assigned new post

To provide improved and expanded sports coverage, a joint Journal and Star sports department has been formed by the combination of the sports staffs of the Lincoln Journal, The Lincoln Star, and Sunday Journal and Star.

The administration of the sports staffs of The Lincoln Star, the Lincoln Journal and the Sunday Journal and Star will be under the direction of Sports Editor Virgil Parker.

The editors of each newspaper will continue to be responsible for the separate sports pages of each newspaper.

Parker, who assumes the additional duties of former Star sports editor Bob Owens, has been the sports editor of the Lincoln Journal since 1972.

Parker, 53, a University of Oregon journalism graduate, joined both Lincoln newspapers in 1957 as prep writer following a 20-year career in the broadcast field in Oregon and New Mexico.

While the owner of Radio KRSN, Los Alamos, N.M., Parker was president of the New Mexico Radio and Television Broadcasters Association, and was elected County Treasurer of Los Alamos County.

Joining his teammate was outfielder Mickey Rivers. Others named to the team were first baseman Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins, second baseman Bobby Grich of the Baltimore Orioles, shortstop Bert Campaneris of the Oakland A's, third baseman George Brett of the Kansas City Royals and outfielders Ron Leflore of the Detroit Tigers and Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox. Ranger coach cites Murdoch

New York (AP) — A twinkle in his eye and the trace of a smile on John Ferguson's face told an observer that the New York Rangers coach was impressed as he talked to a youngster.

"That first one went in like it had eyes," he said to Don Murdoch, who had just scored two goals in a game. "You really ripped that one, kid."

It was vast praise for Murdoch, the Rangers right wing who leads the league in goals with 12 after the first 11 games of his National Hockey League career. The New York coach usually wears a scowl across his face, and a glare from his eyes has shaken more than a few in the past.

While Murdoch has gained Ferguson's approval, the right-winger's father, Jack, stands to lose money.

Before the season began, Murdoch made a bet with his brother Bob, who plays for the Cleveland Barons. "I said, 'Okay, Bob, I'll bet you $1,000 I score more goals than you this season,'" Don Murdoch recalled. "Then we changed so that we'd give the money to our parents. I took Mom and he took Dad."

Entering action Thursday night, Bob Murdoch was 10 goals behind his younger brother, and that left Olga Murdoch, a hospital worker, ahead of her truck driver husband in the friendly contest for the $1,000.

"A kid 19 years old, you don't expect to do the things he's done so far," marvelled Ferguson. Murdoch, who just turned 20, "He's got good anticipation, a good shot, he's a good skater and he back checks. He's got all the credentials."

"I knew he was good enough to make our hockey club; I planned for him to make the hockey club. But I didn't at all expect him to do what he's done."

What he's done is score five goals in a game against the Minnesota North Stars, score the winning goal in four of New York's five triumphs, and become the darling of Rangers fans who have been testy in the club's six home appearances.

The goals are gravy for Murdoch, who had only one in mind when he came to training camp last September—to make the team. "In my mind, the NHL was the big apple—just the idea of playing in it and being part of it is plenty for me," he said.

Kicking game tougher in NFL

By Bruce Lowitt
Associated Press

The kicking this year in the National Football League seems to be lower... and that might be the explanation as well as the problem.

There has been a plethora of blocked or missed placekicks, both extra points and field goals, thus far this season. The reason seems to be twofold — increasing proficiency on the part of the blockers and decreasing proficiency by the so-called "sidewinders," the soccer-style kickers.

The increase in blocks, Denver Coach John Ralston believes, is due "almost entirely to teams spending more time on that part of the game."

And the Broncos' kicker, Jim Turner, who approaches the ball in the more traditional head-on style rather than from the soccer-kicking angle, says: "Absolutely the trend is to the conventional football kicker as we have known him in the past."

The problem with the soccer-style kicker, says Turner, is a lack of trajectory. The ball just doesn't get that high that fast as when a straight-ahead kicker kicks it.

His view is confirmed by someone who views the ball from the opposite side, namely Pittsburgh defensive end L. C. Greenwood, one of the more proficient kick-blockers around.

"If you want to say one type of kicker is easier to block, it would be the soccer-style kicker because of the way he kicks," says the 6-foot-6½ Greenwood. "The conventional-style kicker gets the ball up much higher much quicker."

But Pittsburgh's expert in that department, sidwinding place-kicker Roy Gerela, disagrees. "I believe we get our ball up in the air just as quickly as anybody else," he insists. "I don't think there is any reason to change or get excited about it because, if they block your kick, it's not your fault."

Then whose fault is it?
"The line," Gerela says of the men who block in front of him. "They just have to cut down the penetration, that's all."
That penetration, Steelers special teams coach Paul Ufem says, is the result of hard work. "People are spending more time on it," he notes, "finding out maybe this is a weakness. There is nothing new to blocking kicks and punts, other than just spending time on it. This is what I think people are finding out."

He acknowledges that the conventional kicker might have a bit of an edge in getting the ball up high quickly, but adds "I don't think we'd ever want to change from Gerela's approach." With all of the factors, it's hard to just point the finger at the soccer-style kicker. There is so much of an edge that they have in terms of distance."

Chicago Coach Jack Pardee, whose Bears lost 20-19 to Minnesota because of two unconverted extra points—one missed and one blocked—says there's more cause. "The reason for blocked kicks more and more is that athletes are bigger. You take a 6-5 or 6-6 linebacker such as Matt Blair (the Viking who blocked Bob Thomas' soccer kick for the Bears) and give him a running start and a jump at the ball and he has a chance."

Campbell fines Black Hawks

Montreal (AP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Thursday the NHL has fined the Chicago Black Hawks $500 for refusing to allow reporters into the team's dressing room following an Oct. 9 game.

League by-laws say teams must open their dressing rooms to reporters within 10 minutes of the end of each game. However, the Black Hawks failed to comply following a 2-1 loss to the New York Islanders at Uniondale, N.Y.

"The by-law provides no escape for any clubs, regardless of what justification or excuse may be offered by the offending club," Campbell said. "Any recurrence will automatically double the penalty."

In six games with the Rangers Newman scored one goal and two assists.

Bench cautions Cincinnati

New York (AP) — Johnny Bench came to town to collect his new sports car as the Most Valuable Player of the 1976 World Series Thursday and dropped the subtle warning that Cincinnati shouldn't be too sure about keeping all the cogs in The Big Red Machine.

Discussing the Reds' decision to ignore the re-entry draft next week, the all-star catcher commented:

"I can understand why they are doing it this year. We are the world champions, and it is a luxury they can afford. But it may be different next year."

"Pete, Joe and Tony—and even myself—we may get to thinking that this is our last fling. We will look at all those guys getting $500,000—pitchers like Ken Holtzman and Catfish Hunter, enormous salaries—while we are getting half that much and maybe we'll tend to get edgy about grabbing our share."

"We see a club making $2 (million) and $3 million and figure they can pay more. We respect Bob Howsam's reasons for not going after free agents, saying he wants to be loyal just as we have been loyal. But baseball has become a business."

Howsam is the president of the champion Reds.

In his comments on player reactions, Bench was referring to the heart of the club—Pete Rose, Joe Morgan and Tony Perez, who must renegotiate their contracts next year.

Sooners get more tickets

Oklahoma City (UPI) — University of Oklahoma players are provided more tickets than athletes at other collegiate football powers, the Oklahoma City Times reported Thursday.

The newspaper said more than 1,000 player tickets were supplied to OU players for the recent Texas game. The story said this is at least twice the number provided by other schools for players participating in comparable games.

The Times has reported the NCAA is investigating allegations tickets have been sold at OU through coaches at inflated prices to generate a player "payroll."

Ticket demand is always high at Notre Dame, the newspaper said, but officials have cut out

Bench will be entering the second year of a two-year contract calling for $200,000 a year. This means that he would remain Reds' property through the 1978 season should he elect to play out his option — a revolting thought for Cincinnati bosses and fans.

"It is something Mr. Howsam must think about," Bench said. "If he lets all his good ball players get away, he will have to answer for it. I don't know what baseball is coming to. If salaries keep going up, some clubs won't be able to make it—as it has happened in basketball and the World Football League."

The strapping, 197-pound receiver, who will be 29 on Dec. 7—Pearl Harbor Day—and will be starting his 10th major league season next spring, pondered his own baseball future in a frank discussion at the MVP award luncheon hosted by Sport Magazine.

"I played most of the season in constant pain," he said, harking back to his worst major league season in which he batted .234, hit only 16 home runs and had only 74 runs batted in.

"It felt like somebody was sticking pliers in my back and pinching it. It was the cartilage in my right shoulder. My legs hurt and I felt tired all the time."

Reminded that he had handled the reds' young and suspect pitching staff with tremendous poise, Bench quipped: "You get smarter when you don't hit."

most player tickets.

"The big concern is scalping tickets," Athletic Director Ed "Moose" Krause, was quoted as saying. "And we haven't had that problem for years because we don't allow them to get enough tickets to get involved."

Officials at Nebraska, Texas, Oklahoma and Texas Tech said players are permitted to buy four additional tickets for home games. Penn State sets aside a fixed number of 260 tickets players may buy and Football Coach Joe Paterno determines who gets them and how many, the Times said.

UCLA puts no limit on the number of extra tickets the players may buy because the stadium is larger than the desire for tickets.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Friday, October 29, 1976
Aquarian friend of astrology: Lorne Greene. The popular, Canadian-born actor once approached a youthful astrologer-writer to ask for some special material for a series of broadcasts. The material was forthcoming and presented over Canadian radio — and Sydney Omarr and Lorne Greene became allies of a sort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The unorthodox is featured. You get off beaten paths, become "something more" — routine is out and the unusual is "in." You're able to let go of past and to take a new, stiffer, more realistic, can be released from obligation which prevented progress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Creative opportunity exists — but you should check legal rights, permissions. One who seems flexible may decide to be stubborn. Accent on commitment, ability to inspire style, to inspire confidence and to detect "hidden clauses."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What seems a roadblock or dead end is merely a change of emotional breath. Open lines of communication. Be receptive. Don't attempt to force issues. Time is on your side. You will learn through teaching process. Aquarian is very much in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Obtain hint from Gemini message. Display of versatility could work wonders. You're able to learn truth, to see proof that one who means much to you cares — deeply. You have a revelation. You know what should be done — and you're able to do it.

LEO (July 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on public relations, long-term commitment, marriage. You're able to plan, build, discover what is real as contrasted to wishful thinking. Key is to welcome truth when you encounter it. You'll be asked to make major revision — and it is for your benefit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Low key approach is best — men of opposite sex becomes ally. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You may have to retrace some steps — so doing you meet a fascinating individual. You're asked to evaluate a special service.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Warmth replaces desolation — you are needed, involved. Taurus, Scorpio persons could be in picture. Question of finances, as it affects family and home, will be examined. Be receptive, diplomatic. Young person means well but could be extravagant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Refuse to be misjudged by one who tells out of school. Stick to factual information, not gossip. Protect your interests. Check basic material. Be sure of solid structure. Aura of personal magnetism dominates — people are drawn to you and make no secret of it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Plans subject to quick change, especially where visits and relatives are concerned. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently. Ideas, can be transformed into viable, profitable concepts. Know it and proceed accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get rid of expense which is unnecessary and brings nothing in return. Aries, Libra persons could play key roles. Accent on what you owe have coming to you. Long-distance message or call lifts spirits.

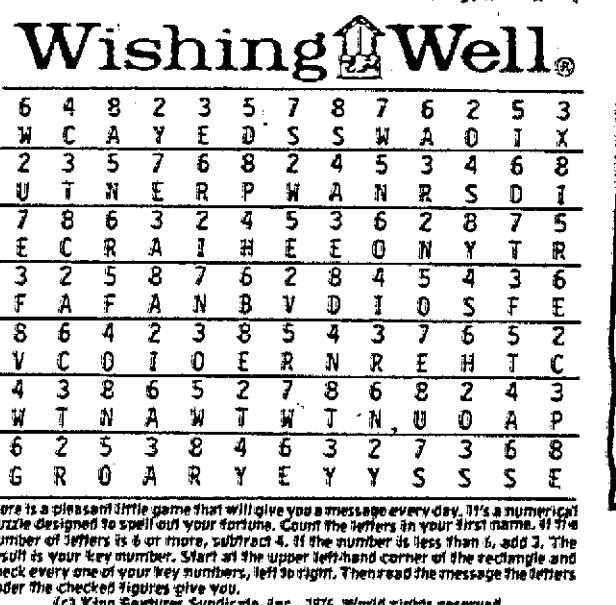

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you can assert yourself, can gain favor with in-laws, relatives, friends. Be independent, original and give full rein to creative potential. You look and feel better — and others tell you about it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romantic interlude is a distinct possibility. Intuitive intellect works overtime. You sense, feel — you learn by teaching. You make decision which some consider bizarre. The unorthodox is now a favorable course.

IF OCTOBER 29th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher, psychologist and an affectionate, caring individual, passionate in beliefs, willing to do battle for a cause and, more often than not, siding with the underdog. Aquarius, Cancer and Leo persons play important roles in your life. You get chance for new start, opportunity to erase past errors in November. If single, you could have married this year. Business and added responsibilities were featured, especially in September. You are continuing to go places!
